THE EPISCOPAL CHURCHES OF EARLY GRANBY

By WILLIAM M. MALTBIE

The area around the ancient church of St. Andrew's, now a part of Bloomfield but in old times called "Scotland," was in the early eighteenth century within the town of Simsbury. Prior to 1740, a controversy arose among Simsbury Congregationalists as to the location of a new meeting house they were going to build. It was finally decided to locate it at the site of the present Simsbury Congregational Church, which meant, for the residents of Scotland desiring to attend that church, a long trek over mountain and river. On Dec. 16, 1740, therefore, six of the residents solemnly warned their Congregational brethren that in view of the hardship it would mean to them, they could not continue in that church, that they had long cherished the Church of England, that they claimed the right to worship as they would, that they would not pay taxes for the construction of the church at Simsbury, and that they protested against any effort to force them to do so. While in these circumstances is found the immediate reason for their withdrawal from the Simsbury Society, it is traditional that as early as 1732 there was an informal society of Episcopalians composed of persons living in and around Scotland—that they had got together timbers to build a church and had sought to secure a minister. In fact, thirty-two persons signed a petition to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, in London, asking that a minister be sent to them.

As a result, the Society, about 1744, despatched as a minister or missionary to the people of Scotland and surrounding areas the Rev. William Gibbs. In that year he organized St. Andrew's Church, and its house of worship was built near the spot where St. Andrew's now stands—in North Bloomfield. Within the field of his ministry was all the town of Granby, which was then a part of Simsbury, and regions to the south and west. He and his parishioners suffered divers persecutions. These culminated about 1754 in his arrest for refusing to pay taxes for the support of the Congregational ministry and his being transported to the jail at Hartford, thrown over the back of a horse with his hands and feet tied beneath the body. He never recovered from this experience and thereafter was able to do little to carry on his work. His ministry resulted not only in the establishment of St. Andrew's Church but also in gathering together a group of his followers who organized a church called St. Ann's, in Salmon Brook, now in the town of Granby. The Rev. Samuel Peters, of Hebron—that royalist clergyman who, returning to England, wrote a scathing but sometimes very amusing attack upon Connecticut—in a letter states that in 1762 he preached the first sermon delivered in St. Ann's.*

In 1763, the Rev. Roger Viets, a graduate of Yale who had been a lay reader at St. Andrew's and who had gone to England for ordination to the priesthood, returned to become Rector of St. Andrew's. It is interesting to note that in a letter written about the time of his return he signed himself as "Asst. to Mr. Gibbs." He was much more than a rector of one church; he was a missionary whose field of service embraced not only Simsbury, then including Granby, but a large area to the north and west. St. Ann's church was in his special care, and in the long lists of baptisms and other rites performed by him as they appear in his records are numerous entries concerning St. Ann's. As early as 1763, he records baptisms performed at "St. Ann's Ch., Salmonbrook" and in that same year notes a communion service in that church in which twenty-four persons were participants.

After Mr. Viets began his ministrations, it is worth noting that whereas at the first four communion services at St. Andrew's the average number of communicants was about eleven, at the first four communions at St. Ann's it averaged about nineteen. Attendants came from points as distant as Granville, Massachusetts. In an early report Mr. Viets states that he was giving one-quarter of his time to St. Ann's. His "Records" are apparently an incomplete recital of his services, because the entries after 1776 are few and lack continuity. Mr. Viets and his parishioners at times undoubtedly received unkind treatment at the hands of their Congregational neighbors. He once was jailed for eight days because he had invaded the exclusive functions of Congregational ministers to perform marriages. During the Revolution he was inclined to side with the royalists, was arrested on a charge of aiding the escape of certain of them, was confined in the underground prison at Newgate, was later taken to the county jail at Hartford, and was for a time in irons. He continued to carry on his ministry, however, until 1787, when he was transferred by the S.P.G. to a pastorate in Nova Scotia.

No record has been found to indicate the location of St. Ann's Church other than that it was in the village of Salmon Brook. It is, however, a reasonable assumption that it stood at the site later occupied by St. Peter's church, and, indeed, it seems apparent that St. Peter's was a successor to St. Ann's. The construction of St. Peter's was begun in 1792, only five years after Mr. Viets left his Connecticut pastorate, and it was completed by the addition of a steeple in 1800. It stood on Salmon Brook Street South, about where the building of the Granby Library now stands. A former resident now deceased, Mrs. Franklyn (Holcomb) Loomis, has given the following description of the building: It was thirty-five feet wide, fifty-eight feet long and thirty feet to the ridge pole; the steeple was twenty-five feet high; there were two aisles, with a double row of pews in the center and pews at the sides and in a gallery; "the pews on the main floor were high with seats all around, [with] panel doors and a little spindle rail about six inches high around the pews and on the doors"—[a description which indicates that the pews were of the box type, each with a door]; "a high and handsome pulpit; all very ornate and handsome." It had a pipe organ built by Peter Jenner Jewett, who lived almost across the way, and it was played by him.

In 1789, St. Peter's was set off from St. Andrew's as a separate parish, but it evidently did not prove strong enough to stand alone. In 1803, an agreement was entered into by the two parishes. Mr. Heald speaks warmly of the truly Christian spirit which permeated that document. It provided, among other things, that "In order to perpetuate that unity and brotherly love which has for so many years so happily existed in this society, it is agreed that the two shall support but one incumbent and neither shall have power to settle or dismiss a minister without the major vote of the other." When a little later the Rev. Asa Cornwall came as the minister of the two churches, it was agreed that he would give an equal time to each.

No records of St. Peter's church are known to exist except those of the Rev. Ransom Warner, who, settling in Simsbury in 1823, became rector of St. Andrew's and St. Peter's. He continued in that position until 1832, then served elsewhere for some four years, and returned to Simsbury, continuing his ministry there until his death in 1856. At least for a time he served at St. Peter's two Sundays each month. Mr. Warner's records include lists of baptisms, marriages, and burials; but they do not indicate to any considerable extent the parishes in which they were performed. That St. Peter's was a thriving parish is indicated by the fact that in 1829 [?] it had sixty children in its Sunday school, with twelve teachers. A number of the leading parishioners, however, joined the great migration to the West; and in Tariffville, which had become a thriving manufacturing town, Trinity Church, which had been established, drew away some who had been regular communicants at St. Peter's. Services at St. Peter's became intermittent in the 1840's and probably ceased by 1852. The church was finally stricken from the roll of parishes in 1852.

Beginning at least as early as 1827, Granby town meetings were regularly held in "St. Peter's Church House," and this continued into the late 1860's. In fact, after religious services ceased to be held in the church, the town seems to have taken over the building. In 1852, it was voted in town meeting that the selectmen, at the expense of the town, should shingle it and repair the windows. The Hartford County Atlas of 1868 designates the building as "Town House" and "Town Hall." Other uses were made of the building, such as the holding of fairs, and the exclamation of Mrs. Loomis seems appropriate: "Chickens in the beautiful box pews, pumpkins and vegetables." In 1845, the steeple was removed. The pipe organ was sold and removed to the First Congregational Church in North Granby.

Finally, in 1870, the building was sold at auction and brought the price of $49.50. No deed to St. Peter's of the land on which it stood has been found. It was squarely upon the line between the properties upon each side. The original Granby Library Association secured the site by two quitclaim deeds, from adjoining property owners, exactly alike, except that one conveyed land north of a line through the center of the lot and the other, land south of that line. The Library Association erected a rather large two-story building for use as an academy and library. When the South Congregational Church was organized in Salmon Brook in the 1870's, it conducted its services on the first floor, and finally, in 1886, bought the building. It was burned about 1918, and the present library, church and parish house were built.

* In his foreword to The Records of Roger Viets, A. C. Bates attributes the establishment of St. Ann's to Mr. Viets. This not only is contrary to the statement by Mr. Peters that he preached in the church before Mr. Viets returned from England in 1763, but it is disproved by the fact that Mr. Viets, almost at once on becoming rector of St. Andrew's in 1763, began to administer the rites of baptism and communion at "St. Ann's Church, Salmonbrook," showing that the church must have been already in existence at that time. The Rev. Mr. Heald, in his anniversary sermon, says that "the church designated as St. Ann's, built in the northern part of the town under the ministry of Mr. Viets, was abandoned and another erected in Salmon Brook." But for reasons already given, St. Ann's was not established by Mr. Viets, and the "town" referred to in the statement ["northern part of the town"] no doubt referred to Simsbury, of which the area now comprizing the town of Granby then formed the northern part. Mr. Viets, in referring in his records to "St. Ann's Ch., Salmonbrook", definitely places it in the village then and now known by that name near the southern boundary of Granby. Burr, The Story of a Country Parish; A History of St. Andrew's, North Bloomfield [an undated document in the Connecticut State Library, prepared for the 200th anniversary of the church, ca. 1944, according to a newspaper clipping lying in the same envelope]; J. E. Heald, Historical Sermon Preached at St. Andrew's April 8, 1866; A. C. Bates, Records of Rev. Roger Viets; A. C. Bates, Records of Rev. ROGER VIETS, YALE GRADUATE

By Franklin Bowditch Dexter*

Roger Viets, the second of ten children of Captain John Viets, was born in that part of Simsbury, Connecticut, which is now East Granby, then known as Turkey Hills, on March 9, 1737–8. His grandfather, John Viets, a Dutch physician from New York, had purchased some of the territory in Simsbury on which copper mines were located, as a speculation, and removed thither. His mother was Lois, youngest child of Samuel and Rachel (Owen) Phelps, of Hartland, a neighboring town. One of his sisters was the mother of Bishop Alexander Viets Griswold, of the Eastern Diocese.

Roger Viets was sent to College with the design of being educated for the Congregational ministry; but while in College or soon after he was led to conform to Episcopacy,—a change in which eventually his entire family followed him.

As the winner of one of the Berkeley Scholarships he remained in New Haven for the year after graduation, and in June, 1759, was employed by the churchmen in his native town as a lay reader, and after nearly two years' service in that capacity the parish proposed to the Venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel his appointment to the mission among them.

He visited Newport, Rhode Island, in June or July, 1761, just after having been inoculated for the small-pox in New York City, and in November took charge of the parish school connected with Trinity Church. Soon, however, he was back in Simsbury, whence he went to England for orders in January, 1763, though not the unanimous choice of the parish. He was ordained in March, and returned in June with a commission for his native town. That parish was already burdened with another, mentally broken-down minister, the Rev. William Gibbs, whose life continued until March, 1777; and partly for this reason Mr. Viets was so insufficiently paid * that he was obliged to work as a farmer in the summer and as a teacher in the winter. His library is said to have been larger than that of any other Episcopal clergyman in the Colony. He was the only missionary in what is now Hartford County, and labored with such zeal that in 1774 the Episcopalians in Simsbury were more numerous than in any other towns in Connecticut, except Newtown and New Haven. His residence, as well as the church in which he ministered, was within the limits of the present town of Bloomfield.

In the period of the Revolution he was understood to sympathize with England, and as a punishment for assisting two British officers to escape from prison, and for traitorous correspondence with the enemy, he was fined by the Superior Court of the County in January, 1777, £20, and condemned to be imprisoned in the Hartford jail for one year. On his petition to the General Assembly in May he was set at liberty, but confined to the limits of Simsbury for the balance of the year and put under heavy bonds to avoid further charges.

Like many of his brethren, he found himself at the close of the war unable to secure an adequate support from his dwindled and impoverished flock; so that he was at length induced to accept the offer of a parish in Nova Scotia, with a continuance of aid from the Propagation Society. Accordingly, in May, 1786, he went to Digby, on the eastern bank of the Bay of Fundy, where he was inducted into the rectorship on August 28, the Rev. James Scovil (Y. C. 1757) assisting at the ceremony. No church was yet erected, and in October he returned to his old home and spent the winter there with his family. He left Connecticut again early in June, 1787, and arrived in Digby with his family on the 20th of the same month. He visited the States a second time in 1789, and it was not until January, 1791, that a church (of wood) was finally opened in Digby. His life there was interrupted by one more visit to his former flock, in June and July, 1800, and he died in office in Digby, on August 11 or 15, 1811, in his 74th year.

* He received £40 a year from England.

He married first Hester Botsford, who died on April 25, 1800, in her 47th year, and next at Kingston, New Brunswick, July 18, 1802, Mercy Isaacs. One of his two sons succeeded him in his rectorship; he had also six daughters.

He published :—

A statement Made by me Concerning the Glebe firstly I shall take into Consideration the Deed of the land from Sam[l] Beman to those people in the village of Scotland profesing themselves to be of that order Call[d] the Chirch of England and to no set of people in any differant part can have any Claim to this land. It is on this ground that I expect to justify myself for doing as I have in regard to the improvement of s[d] land as for Calling that Scotland where the New Church House stands is vain, unjust, and untrue I appeal to you notwithstanding all that has been said I have heard you call that Duncaster more times than there ever was Barrels of Cider made on the Glebe in one year or Bushels of oats raisd on sd land at any time Not withstanding all this I k[n]ow as you also know that those People have sued us and recovered against us I would turn your attention to our Psalmist pleas to Read the first part of the 74[th] Psalm in our prayerbook if that is not suffiscient I would turn your attention to some of these same men who you now promote to take the lede see what they have done to some of our forefathers for nothing else only they were Chirchman If this is not sufficient I must continue to Call on that Almity being who is sufficient for all things as our Psalmist also Calls— my time is Short and cannot continue any further

I remain your &c

N B wishing your serious attention to these facts Believing that you will think that we ought not to be found guilty of cours[e] ought not to pay any thing—

My Dear Bp.; You have at some time when here expressed your wish to obtain a copy of the original deed of the Glebe of St. Andrew's Church. A Copy of that duly signed, having fallen in my way, within a few days, I herewith send you a Copy. You will doubtless bear in mind that when that Glebe was purchased, and the deed drawn, Simsbury comprised the section of country now known as Simsbury, Canton, Granby, & some at least, of the northern portion of Bloomfield.

The missionary's labors were not confined to "Scotland," a small eastern portion of Simsbury, but given to the whole "country round about"—they were even extended to Southwick in Mass. 10 miles from "Scotland". I presume there would be no difficulty in getting the use of the Glebe for this mission, when once in God's good providence, there may be a vacancy in St. Andrew's

With every Christian kindness towards my Revd. Brother, I must say, that every additional month brings urgent reasons why St. Andrew's should be vacant at once. I do not know whether services have been there of late. Our congregation loses nothing in numbers, or apparent interest.

I wish to ask if it is your intention to visit St. Andrews the coming winter? If so, may we expect your visitation of this Parish in the afternoon of the same day? I could have, I think, a few candidates for confirmation. Could we look for the visitation on some Sunday, if at all? Mr. Peck is doing us a good work in music. I will, with the Copy, send you an extract from the minutes of St. Andrews soc. at the time St. Peters Granby was formed into a church. I have some other old documents in my hands which, if possible, I will retain for your inspection.

The Volume which I hoped to get from Wilcox, I have not quite in full possession, but hope to have soon, and will send by Mr. Peck.

I have detained you too long by my introduction of the copy of the "Deed" &c, but believe me to be as ever, Right Rev & Dear Sir,

Yours, very truly and faithfully

Henry H. Bates

P.S I have of late exchanged two letters with a young man hitherto unknown to me, who is thinking somewhat of giving himself to the ministry [of?] the church. He gives me his name "Benjamin F. Cooley," of East Granville, Mass. He is a relative of the "good old Parson Cooley" of that town. In due time I shall hope to send him with an introduction to the Bishops

The following extract may be of some use in showing that in the year 1798 Churchmen in this region deemed it agreeable to the spirit of the Deed of Glebe in 1742, to allow something for the support of services, from the profits of the Glebe, out of "Scotland village."

At a legal meeting of St. Andrews Society on the 19th day of November A. D. 1798.

"Voted and resolved by more than two thirds of the members of said church as follows, Viz. that all those members of this society who live in Granby, Hartland, Suffield, & that part of Windsor lying North of Windsor Ferry River so called be separated & set off from this society & to be called by the name of the Prot. Epis. Society of Granby, Hartland & parts adjacent, & members of the Ch. of St. Peters in Salmonbrook" (Granby Center). . . . . "and furthermore in order that there should be no future disputes respecting Glebes or other property belonging to the church society in Simsbury, Granby and parts adjacent it is fully agreed and understood that the new soc. shall have and hold their equal proportion of all & singular rights uses & benefits to be appropriated to the support of our said Incumbent with the Soc. in Simsbury that are or shall be members of St. Andrews Ch. in the Glebes and property belonging to said society, and in full confirmation of this special contract & agreement we have caused the said to be recorded", &c, &c, &c.

Rev. William F. Nichols,

Dear Sir,-

My brother has, today handed me a letter that he received from you requesting the original subscription paper of St. Andrew's Church. Looking through all the old papers I have, I find that the enclosed are all that I possess which relate to the foundation of St. Andrew's parish. Probably there have been many destroyed that my Father once possessed, but I think you may find some information in these. When I come to the city, I will call upon you and impart to you any information that I can.

Respectfully yours

Elizabeth Mitchelson.

Revd Dear sir

I reached home the 2nd Day after my leaving your House, since which Time I have had almost constant Sickness in my Family and have buried an Infant Daughter.

Having been disappointed as yet in procuring a Vessel to carry me to Nov. Scot. I wish for your Advice whether it would not be best for me to send my moveables to Boston by water and move myself, Family & Stock by Land to Boston, and get a Passage from Boston to the Mason [? Bason] of Annapolis. Pray inform me how much a Passage from Boston would cost.(About 8 or 9 Persons of which 4 are Children 4 or 5 Head of Cattle an ordinary Quantity of Household Goods & Provision for one year) But do not make any Bargain because perhaps my Friends in New York or on the Connecticut Sound will yet procure a Passage for me. Are there not fishing Vessels of about 50 or 60 Tons going towards the Bay of Fundy or Vessels going for Lumber to Passamaquoddy, which would carry me cheap. When I get to Quoddy 'tis but 12 Hours Sail to Digby. I think I shewed you my Permit, such as it is, from Gov.r Parr to bring in my Family and Effects to Nov. Scot. from Connecticut, & I asked your Advice about coming by Land to Boston and taking Passage there as aforesd and I think you rather advised against it; but I would be glad of your Opinion more fully & maturely. Whilst I am waiting for a Passage at Boston, I would keep myself & Family a few Miles out of Town.

Suffer me to trouble you with one further Particular, That you would be so kind as to insert in your Letter to me p.r Col. Pitt a Copy of a Paragraph of a Letter you wrote to the Society or some Friend in London a few years ago, and which you read to me once. The Part I want is only what respected the Missions at Hopkinton & Cambridge & as nearly as I can remember was this in substance "The Congregation at Hopkinton is intirely dispersed and the Church become a Dwelling House- The Church at Cambridge much in the same Condition, Mrs Serjeant is unwell and helpless, and has pawned the Communion Plate weighing ____ Oz for _____ Pounds ___Shillings___."

The Reason of my desiring this Extract is that a Gentleman & I were talking a few Days past about these Churches, and he did not seem to credit my Account. You may depend that no other Use shall be made of your Extract than to convince this Gentleman of my Veracity, for he is an intimate Friend, whom I greatly esteem.

We had a very full Convention at Wallingford ye 27 ult., the chief Business done was to agree to send a second Brother home for Consecration. They chose Mr Leaming, he declined— then Mr Mansfield he declined. I came away before they made a 3rd Choice, but I believe it was likely to fall [on] Mr Hubbard.

They agreed to make a new Prayer-Book and chose a Committee therefore. I imagine they have not agreed on a new Bible as yet. To see the Church of England mangled, insulted, crucified, not between 2, but between a Dozen of— I know not what—is a bitter Pill to your most sincere Friend, most loving Brother and obedient, humble Servant

Roger Viets.

Revd Mr Parker.

Digby in Nova Scotia 10th Decem^r 1798.

Dear Sir

A few Days ago I rec^d your kind Letter dated Septr 5th 1798, and yesterday, I rec^d your other Letter dated 10th October 1798. on the same Sheet with the Revd Mr Todd's Letter, for which I thank you & Mr Todd.

I am extremely sorry for your Infirmity & Distress on Account of your Lameness, which I hope You will bear with Christian Patience & godly Resignation, & I pray that God in due Time will give You Relief. In him You must put your Trust & Confidence.

I desire also to Sympathize with you in your temporal Losses by the Olcotts and Capt Charles Case &c. I hope for the future you will take good Care whom you trust for large Sums.

Please to inform Mr Todd that I am extremely obliged to him as well as you for the Information concerning Church Affairs, as I am anxious alway to hear of the Prosperity of the Church. Pray what Griswold does Mr Todd call a Justice of the Peace?

Mr William Case was here lately and informed me of many particulars of the Western Part of my former Mission.

I had never rec^d till your Letter the least Intimation that the Strap was sold. I am sorry it is sold, tho' I doubt not those who sold it did it with Intention to oblige me and for that Reason I thank them. Will you be so good in your next as to inform me when it was sold; for what Price; How Payment is to be made What Security you have for the Payment; Whether the Interest is to be paid yearly; whether the Men who are obligated for the Payment are perfectly responsible; whether one or more are bound; and indeed every Particular requiste for me to know. By the Hints you give me concerning the Strap Meadow I presume the Interest is to be paid yearly; if so please to let them know that I expect the Interest Money to the present Time soon. And if they do not pay it soon oblige them to do it. And the same Annually. If they cannot pay such a small Sum yearly how can they ever expect to be able to pay the Principal. I cannot afford to lose it. I have lost enough already by foolish Delays. I shall, I fear, have the same Complaint to make of them, that you have of Capt Charles Case, if I do not look out in Season. I suppose it is two of Capt John Case's sons that have bought it. If they are not able to pay for it and will deed it back to me I am content, they paying a reasonable Rent for the Time they have used it. In short, I desire of you as a sincere Friend to see that the Principal is well secured, & the Interest punctually paid annually. Which having received, be so good as to send the Money by a safe Hand to the Reverend Dr Samuel Parker at Boston. You may find Opportunities very often from Hartford or Windsor &.c. Likewise if you wish to write to me send the Letter by the same Hand to the Care of Dr Parker. But if you cannot get such Opportunity to write to me; do not fear Cost of Postage, for I will pay it all; I shall never think hard of paying Postage for a Letter from such a Friend as you.

Relative to Notes left in your Hands. Please to deliver up Mr. Nathaniel Humphry's Note. I do not wish him to pay it—— Mr. Elnathan Alderman's is paid to Mrs Viets. ——Mr. Aninah Moore's two Notes were justly due, please to inform me when how & to whom they were paid—— And be so good as to inform me how Elisha Griswold Jnr. Account stands with me or let him write me. I suppose 100 Bushels of the Rye I recd. came from him—— What has become of Abner Viets's Note which was in Mr. Farnham's Hands—— 'Tis probable that Lemual Kilbourn's Note is paid to Brother Griswold's Sons, if so they must give me Credit for it unless they have already done it— See that Elisha, Alexander & Ezra Griswold's Note of £23. is allowed to me in their Statement of their Account with me.

Will you please to inform me of all these Things in your next. You may sit & dictate & let Eliphalet write, if you are not well enough to write much. Ezra & Roger have sent me a Statement of their Accounts; desire my Brother Abner to do the same. Abner Viets refers me to the Receits; but I have had some Articles of him; And I wish he would send me such Statement as Ezra & Roger have done, please to tell him so. I have recd. sundry Letters from Ezra full of the most abusive, offensive Language. But Elishal Jur. writes very handsome & friendly. I wish for another Letter from Elisha, I will pay the Postage. I had many Enquiries to make concerning Mrs. Mitchelsone, John, Eliphalet, Martin, Howard, Susann, Arispa and Elizabeth, I forgot Ariel. But Paper fails me. Give my Respects of all Friends especially my Mother, Brother Griswold's & Mr. Todd & Family. May God bless you

Farewell Roger Viets.

[Postal cancellation: Prov. R. I. Mar 24]

Digby in Nova Scotia 30th October 1799.

To Mr. Eliphalet Mitchelson.

Dear Sir.

About a Fortnight ago I received a Letter from Mr. Freeman Graham, which is the last I have received from those Parts: But Mr. Graham did not tell a Syllable how my Relations & Friends were in Simsbury or whether they were dead or alive.

By Capt. James Moody my Neighbour I have written Letters to my Brother Abner, to Alexander, to Ezra, to yourself, to the Revd. Mr. Todd and to the said Freeman Graham; Capt. Moody is going to Boston and from thence to New York by Land, and I desired him to leave all these Letters with young Mr. Samll. Marsh of Hartford, who married a Miss Jones, whose Brother & Sister are my Neighbours. If any Expence of Postage should fall on Mr. Marsh, tell Elisha Griswold Jur. to pay it to Mr. Marsh and charge it to me. In those I wrote Lengthy, insomuch that I have not much more to write at present.

This Letter I send by one David Basset who has promised to forward it by a private hand without Postage, but should any Postage accure I will discount it wth. any who owe me if they will pay it you.

Will you be so kind as to notify the Persons above named that I have written very particular to them in Case the Letters by Capt. Moody should fail, and thank Mr. Freeman Graham in particular for his Care and Discretion used in my Affairs, by which he saved a considerable from being lost to me.

If I can possibly go to Simsbury next Spring or Summer I intend, God willing to go there; should I go, I wish those who owe me to pay me each of them a little Money that I may get enough to bear my Expences. I wish they would exert themselves to get a little Money for me, altho' Money is scarce. Will you please to tell Elisha & Ezra and my Brother Abner Viets of this.

I should be glad they would save some Garden Seeds for me, especially some Cucumber Seeds & some Apple Seeds to plant a Nursery.

Doubtless they have received Account in my former Letters that I had received the four Hundred Bushels of Rye last Year from different Persons, and the Two Ploughs which Elisha sent me. Elisha offered to abate in the Price of the Rye, but I will allow him the whole Price I offered.

As I said in my other Letters I beg You would use the utmost Care to secure the Money for which the Strap was sold & indeed all my other Debts.

Please to give my best Respects & Duty to my honored Mother; and tell her that if I undertake the Voyage next Summer it is in great Measure to see her.

I am heartily sorry for your Lameness & hope it will please God to restore you to Your Health.

I hope you will receive your Letters by Capt Moody before you receive this

Give my Respects to all my Friends to the Holcombs, the Pinnys, the Moores, the Aldermans the Cases the Terrys the Fullers the Slaters, the Lomisses, the Enos s, the Viets s the Griswolds the Clarks and all Friends I remain your sincere Friend & humble Servant

A BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE ON ROGER VIETS

Roger Viets, the S. P. G. missionary in New England, a portion of whose journal appears in the following facsimiles, was born at East Granby, Connecticut, on March 9, 1737/8, the son of John and Lois (Phelps) Viets. Having received his A.B. degree from Yale College in 1758, he was ordained in London in March, 1763, and became the Society's missionary in and about Simsbury, Connecticut, in that same year. His labors carried him outside his mission station in all directions, especially into Massachusetts. On August 28, 1786, he was rewarded for having endured the rigors of the American Revolution by being appointed the Venerable Society's missionary at Digby, Nova Scotia, continuing there (except for a visit to the States) until his death on August 11, 1811, at the age of 74.[1] While resident in New England, his energy carried him to at least the following towns where he ministered:

Avon, Connecticut
Barkhamsted, Connecticut
Bloomfield, Connecticut
Branford, Connecticut
Canton, Connecticut
Chester, Connecticut
Colebrook, Connecticut
Danbury, Connecticut
East Granby, Connecticut
East Windsor, Connecticut
Enfield, Connecticut

Hartford, Connecticut
Hartland, Connecticut
Harwinton, Connecticut
Kent, Connecticut
Killingsworth, Connecticut
Litchfield, Connecticut
New Hartford, Connecticut
New Milford, Connecticut
North Guilford, Connecticut
Sharon, Connecticut
Simsbury, Connecticut
Stratford, Connecticut
Suffield, Connecticut
Tariffville, Connecticut
Washington, Connecticut
Waterbury, Connecticut
Wethersfield, Connecticut
Windsor, Connecticut
Woodbury, Connecticut

Blandford, Massachusetts
Boston, Massachusetts
Great Barrington, Mass.
Lanesbury, Massachusetts
Marblehead, Massachusetts
Marlboro, Massachusetts
Pittsfield, Massachusetts
Sheffield, Massachusetts
Springfield, Massachusetts
Stockbridge, Massachusetts
Westfield, Massachusetts

Austerlitz, New York
Loudenville, New York (near Albany)

His many missionary reports from Simsbury to the S. P. G. in England are extant and may be examined on films in the Diocesan Archival Collection. A few have been published in abbreviated form,[2] some specimens of which will appear below. Viets' career is discussed in our principal diocesan history[3] and in a recent Yale doctoral dissertation.[4] One of his letters to the Rev. Bela Hubbard, of New Haven, dated Oct. 19, 1767, was edited by William Agur Beardsley a quarter of a century ago.[5] He is mentioned in sketches of his kinsman, the Rt. Rev. Alexander Viets Griswold,[6] and in accounts of early Yale alumni.[7] An excerpt from one of his letters to Abraham Beach, written at Nova Scotia, ca. August, 1788, describing that province and his work in it, has recently appeared.[8] Another letter—to Samuel Parker, March 19, 1787—is owned by the Massachusetts Diocesan Library, 1 Joy Street, Boston 8. Some of his typical reports from Simsbury to London follow:[9]

Rev. Sir:

I have continued hitherto with gratitude, and to the utmost of my power, to serve the Honourable Society, and, by God's blessing, with good success. A considerable body of people in and about Great Barrington having conformed to the Church. I being the nearest Missionary to them, undertook to visit them as often as I conveniently could, till the Honourable Society should have otherwise ordered. In one of my visits I joined a couple in Marriage, having previously had evidence of their legal publication, of the consent of the parents and guardians of the parties, and that there was no just cause or impediment why they should not be joined together. For this I was arrested at my next visit on the 30th of January, in the midst of my congregation, and in my robes, soon after the conclusion of the morning Service, and conveyed within one or two hours to the County Jail, where I continued 8 days, (with many indulgences from the jail-keeper;) and then gave bond with 3 substantial sureties for my appearance at the Court, which is 50 miles from Symsbury: I employed 3 Attorneys and attended the Court, but the action was never entered in the county clerk's book against me: the gentleman who prosecuted me was one Mr. Mark Hopkins, town clerk, county treasurer, King's Attorney, and brother to the dissenting teacher at Great Barrington, who took me to Mr. Timothy Hopkins, brother to the same dissenting teacher. My expense in this affair, besides the disgraceful insults and indignities I have suffered, amounts to a considerable sum, and has been of great detriment to me and the people of my Mission. I submit to the Honourable Society's approbation or censure, and beg their advice and direction, for which I wait with impatience. My licence from the lord Bishop of London extends throughout New England, and as to what is mentioned in the writ (a copy of which I send enclosed,) concerning a certificate from the town clerk, there are frequent instances of marrying without it: however, after the marriage I demanded, and procured it, and send a copy also enclosed. The judges of the Court treated me with kindness and complaisance; and I have reason to think they were very far from beginning or forwarding the prosecution. I could produce very full testimonies of my labours and success at Great Barrington and adjacent parts, as well as at Symsbury. The people of Great Barrington have actually begun to provide materials for erecting a Church, which is to be by far the most beautiful and expensive building in that County. The plan is taken from the Church at Stratford in Conneticut, though not so large as Stratford Church. I hope in a short time, to give the Honourable Society some further account of this glorious undertaking. A few scattering inhabitants of a settlement called Nobletown, about 8 miles west of Great Barrington, have erected a frame of a very small Church.

I am, Rev. Sir,

Your most obedient, humble Servant,

ROGER VIETS.

Symsbury, June 23d, 1764.

Rev. Sir:

My labor and success are much the same as I have mentioned in my former letters. In the last half year I have christened 1 adult and 41 infants, buried 5, married 2 couple. Many (if not the major part) of conformists, as well as of others, in my neighborhood, apply to the civil magistrate to be married.

With the utmost grief and concern, I observe that there are great numbers in my mission unbaptized, and many persons whom I have good reason to think very well qualified for the Lord's Supper, yet neglect that blessed Sacrament. Both these sorts I have endeavoured in public and private to bring to a sense of their duty; but the general excuse is: "These Sacraments will not save us." "If we have true faith, we shall be saved without them." "And if we have not, we shall perish though baptized and communicants." These and other false reasonings I endeavoured to confute, and shall labour still more to support the credit of the holy Sacraments. The books which the venerable Society were so good as to send me I have distributed in the best manner I was able, and they have done excellent service. Now I am humbly necessitated to request some more Prayer Books and pious Tracts; such as the venerable Society shall think proper, especially some concerning the nature, design, necessity, importance and usefulness of the two Sacraments, and something to explain the cross in Baptism, and the responses of the sureties, which seem stumbling blocks to some. Such books are uncommonly necessary in my mission, being 35 miles from any other Episcopal minister, and the dissenting teachers of this country too lightly esteem the Sacraments. I should be extremely thankful to the venerable Society, if it might please them to bestow upon me, for my own use, some more large expositions and defence of the articles, canons, liturgy, offices, rites, ceremonies and injunctions of the Church, than I have yet read. Such books

7 See F. M. Dexter, Yale Graduates, 1701-1815, in six volumes.
9 See note 2 above.

I would peruse several times with the greatest attention, and should then be more ready to give a convincing answer to every query and objection of dissenters, many of whom seem to need only the being informed to conform.

The good people of St. Ann's Church, Salmonbrook, proceed towards the completing of their little church, as fast as their poverty and other difficulties will admit. The good people of Great Barrington have now raised the frame of their church, which, though not large, yet, on account of its architecture, beauty, expense and regularity, would be reckoned no mean country church, even in England. It is 50 feet by 40, with a front gallery, a beautiful chancel, and a steeple about 115 feet high. It is named Christ Church in Great Barrington. There are in my possession 4 deeds, from some good people of Great Barrington, to the Society, in trust, for the use of their church, which I will carefully transmit by the first good and safe opportunity. I conjecture that these lands amount to about the value of £100 sterling, and may rent at about £4 per annum. I send with this a copy of my letter of March 14th, 1764, also the New York Gazette, in which an account of the same matter was published, in general, true and exact. Much the same account, I am informed, was published in the Boston paper, and I have never heard that either of them has been contradicted. I remain, with thankfulness and submission,

The venerable Society's and your most Obedient and humble Servant,
ROGER VIETS.

Symsbury, June 25, 1765.

Rev. Sir:

I have received the venerable Society's letter of November last, for which I am heartily thankful.

As to Hartland, [Hartford?] I am willing to submit to the venerable Society's determination, but beg a little time to consult the circumstances, tempers and expectations of the people of that place. In the meantime I shall be ready to assist them on week days, as often as they desire, though they are not absolutely within my cure.

In the affair at Barrington, I endeavoured to overcome evil with good, which attempt I found very successful and advantageous. My conduct in that matter received the approbation of the greater part of the dissenters, and my own people (so far from being prejudiced against me thereby, as I was at first inconsiderately apprehensive,) greatly resented the malice and meanness of my prosecutors. I have now no fear of any bad consequences of that transaction, unless it should deprive me of the favour of the venerable Society, upon which I principally depend for my credit, direction and support, in a situation and profession of toil and difficulty. I will not offer one word in justification of an action which the venerable Society have pronounced irregular, whose judgment I acknowledge to be infinitely superior to mine; yet, by way of apology, I would observe, that as far as I can learn, the Clergy of the Church have been allowed to solemnize marriage universally throughout New England, without being thought to transgress the limits of their cure: otherwise, how could those Episcopal Churches which are destitute of a regular pastor, as above half the churches of New England are, have marriages performed in such a way as their consciences direct. The law on which I was prosecuted was passed when there was one or no Church in New England, and therefore could not specially refer to the Church Clergy. The law seems evidently intended to prevent those dissenting preachers who are settled within certain limits, from infringing on each other, the certificate I knew not to be essential, before I performed the marriage; and as soon as I found out how necessary the letter, though not the meaning of the law had made it, I was very sorry I had not obtained it beforehand. I give the venerable Society great thanks for the good books which they intend for me, which I hope ere long to receive, and improve to the advantage and edification of myself and my parishioners. I have baptized the last half year 38 infants, and have at present 34 steady communicants, and lost some by death and removals: however, I hope in my next to give a larger account of my communicants. ——

Symsbury, June 25th, 1766.

Rev. Sir:

—— There are such numbers of persons newly conforming, as something more than compensate for the numbers which the Church by several methods loses; for the venerable Society will please to observe, that many of my Episcopal parishioners remove their habitations into places far distant from all Episcopal Churches, and thereby are lost to our Church; that the dissenting meetings are so numerous, and in each of them a dissenting minister so constant, that the greater part of my people dwell much nearer to some meeting house, in which extemporary sermons and prayers are steadily exhibited, than to a Church in which the Service can be but seldom performed by one in holy orders: that, of consequence, many children of conformists will become dissenters, and that the dissenting cause has all the power and influence of civil government to support and countenance it. To these considerations may be added, the uncommon zeal which the dissenters of this Colony have for their own persuasion; the wealth, connections and ostentation of their teachers, the great veneration for the dissenting religion and its ministers, ceremonies and peculiarities, which is with surprising and indefatigable industry, instilled into their children with every part of their education: but, especially, the great superiority in numbers, which the opposers of the Church have against her friends, which gives a very great advantage in a place like the Colony of Conneticut. The form of government is almost, or entirely Republican. The proportion of Church people to the dissenters in Symsbury is nearly as one to three. The estimate of estate in Symsbury (for the year 1765) on which taxes are laid is £23,944 17*s.*, of which £6,050 17*s.* is possessed by Episcopalians. The number of heads of families, under my care, in Symsbury, and parts adjacent, is 153. ——

Symsbury, in N. England, Nov. 22d, 1766.

Rev. Sir:

—— When the Stamp duty was promulgated in America, the Episcopalians of Connecticut, in general, (without a reprehensible officiousness) paid such a proper deference of submission, as we supposed ought to be paid to an Act of Parliament, at the same time bearing testimony against riotous, not to say rebellious proceedings of our neighbours; for which decent and loyal conduct we are still treated with unusual cruelty. Indeed, I at first feared a demolition of our Churches and dwelling houses. This calamity we happily escaped, but have been deprived of almost every one of the few public offices which we had enjoyed before, and have been constantly pointed at as the worst of traitors to our country, and betrayers of her most essential interest and liberties: but as the Parliament were pleased to promise special countenance and reward to such as behaved loyally in this point, so we have reason to hope that we shall at least have the pleasure to see Episcopacy, in due time, placed by that august body on an equal footing with sectarianism in New England. The authorities of old England, I doubt not, have found and will find Episcopalians in New England their most zealous defenders, for many obvious reasons.

—— Our parishes, being so often and so long vacant, gives the very numerous and very vehement body of dissenting preachers (whose number is supposed by some not to fall short of 2000 in America) the fairest opportunities to carry on their favorite business of proselyting, in which employment, I am informed, they have made such alarming progress in some of the Episcopal Colonies, as to give serious ground to apprehend they may, in time, turn the scale of the establishment, unless there be a Bishop sent to America, which I pray God there may soon be; and could the venerable Society be on the spot and see the anxiety and concern of our poor, honest, conscientious people, for the privilege of having their children confirmed, and of having a greater number of ministers among them, they would not wonder at our importunity. I remain, venerable Sir, the Society's

And your most dutiful Missionary,

And most humble, obedient Servant,

Roger Viets.

Symsbury, in New England, June 25th, 1768.

Rev. Sir:

There have been several efforts lately made by the dissenters to oppress me as well as my people; as the bulk of New England is uneasy at some late regulations of the Government on your side the water, and look on us missionaries and our parishioners, as too much connected with Europe: but the cruelty and oppressions of dissenters only tend to unite us more closely among ourselves, and add to our numbers. ——

I have now been in my mission five years, during which time I have read prayers and preached twice every Sunday, and often thrice a day, at different places, in the summer season—have christened 19 adults, 399 infants—married 28 couples—buried 34 corpses. My people in Symsbury have increased within this period, from 105 females to 161; in the townships adjacent, from 32 to 51; my communicants from 35 to 45, and I have had the happiness of such an universal affection from my people, that I cannot recollect a single person belonging to the Church at my arrival here, who has left the Church since: though it must be confessed, that several within the five years have conformed to the Church very hastily, and as hastily left it. This extraordinay unity I attribute to the goodness of God, and not to any excellence in myself. But it is to be observed, that the greater part of my people are very indigent, though very honest and well-behaved: nor could so many dissenting ministers be maintained, were it not by the assistance of the New England government which denominates us dissenters, and treats us as such.

There are fifty-two Congregational ministers in this County, viz: Hartford. In all the four New England Calonies there are 586 Congregational ministers, 38 of the Church Clergy, 39 Anabaptists, 10 Presbyterian, 30 Quaker Assemblies, and about 50 congregations of those called Separatists, somewhat resembling the old Independents.

It is the Congregationalists that take the chief benefit of the New England Establishment, (so called) not the Presbyterians, as has so often been inaccurately alledged. I will only add, that some of the money to support dissenting preachers is extorted from Churchmen, unjustly and illegally, in my humble opinion, who am, with gratitude and submission, &c.

Roger Viets.

ST. ANDREW'S, SIMSBURY, CONN.

AND

MISSIONARY FROM THE SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS

1763-1800

PREFACE.

The manuscript of this record is preserved in the family of Rev. Ransom Warner, formerly rector of St. Andrew's, by whom it was discovered many years since. It consists of forty-seven yellow and time-worn leaves about seven inches square. Undoubtedly the record originally covered the full period of Mr. Viets's service at St. Andrew's as well as his visit to the United States in 1800, but many of the leaves are now loose and probably some have been lost.

The following sketch has been inserted not because it contains any new historical material, but from the belief that it would serve to answer some questions which might occur to users of the record.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

In the year 1740 there was organized in the easterly part of the town of Simsbury, Connecticut, known as Scotland, and within the limits of the present town of Bloomfield, the Episcopal parish of St. Andrew's. From the humble beginning of six persons it grew rapidly, in spite of the ill repute in which the sect was held by the Congregationalists. The year 1744, previous to which a glebe of fifty acres had been purchased and a church erected, marks the coming of their first pastor, Rev. William Gibbs, who was sent to the mission by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. His active labors were suddenly brought to a close after ten years by a melancholia or loss of mind. This grievous trouble was brought upon him by the barbarous treatment to which he was subjected for refusing to pay a tax laid for the support of the Congregational minister within the limits of whose parish St. Andrew's was situated. For this refusal he was arrested, thrown over a horse, and with hands and feet bound together so as to secure him to the horse was conveyed to Hartford jail. After this he performed his ministerial duties occasionally as his health would permit, and continued to reside in the parish until his death, March 22, 1777, "in the 63d year of his age, and the 33d of his mission, and 23d of his illness."

In June, 1759, Roger Viets, a native of Simsbury and a graduate of Yale College the previous year, with the degree of A.B., who through his reading in the college library had become converted to the Episcopal belief, was employed by the parish as a lay reader. After he had served two years in that capacity the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel was informed that "his religious Principles and moral Character are such, that the People of Simsbury are desirous of engaging him in their Service, if the Society should see fit to indulge them, in his Favour, with some Addition to the Salary allowed to that Mission." Upon this, "the Society taking the Case of Mr. Gibbs's Parish into Consideration, have agreed to receive Mr. Viets into their Service, and make him an Allowance of 20l per Annum, for the Care of the Church of Simsbury, as soon as he shall be admitted to holy Orders and enter upon the Care of that Parish." There being no Bishop at this time in America, Mr. Viets made a voyage to England and was admitted to orders in the spring of 1763. Upon his return he at once entered with energy upon his duties as rector of the, at this time, somewhat disorganized parish of St. Andrew's. Nor were his labors confined to this parish alone ; a glance at his record of christenings will show that his work extended into other towns, some of them forty or more miles away. Under his active ministry the church increased in size and prosperity, and a new mission called St. Ann's was established at Salmon Brook in the present town of Granby, about five miles distant, where services were held one Sunday in each month. A church was also built at Great Barrington, Mass., about thirty miles distant.

His reports made to the "Venerable Society" contain numerous references to the insults and petty persecutions to which himself and his people were subjected. After having paid their rate towards his support, his followers were often forced to pay a further rate towards the support of the "dissenting" minister.

At the breaking out of the Revolution Mr. Viets favored the royalist side of the cause and in consequence was closely watched. At one time, upon suspicion of having aided in the escape of some royalist prisoners, he was seized and thrown into Hartford jail, where he was kept for a time in irons. He continued his ministry here until the close of the Revolution. In 1787, upon the invitation of the "Venerable Society," which until the acknowledgment of American independence had given its aid to the Episcopal parishes, he removed to Nova Scotia and became rector of the church in Digby, where he continued to reside until his death August 11, 1811.

An important event in his life was his visit in 1800 to the scene of his former labors in Connecticut, at which time he christened many of the children of his old friends and former parishioners.

During his connection of twenty-eight years with the parish of St. Andrew's its prosperity was noteworthy, as is shown by the fact the number of church families under his care increased during that time from 75 to 280.

Mr. Viets, who was known as a cultured and scholarly man, had a well-selected library said to have been the best in the colony in his day. He was the second of the ten children of Captain John and Lois (Phelps) Viets. He was born March 9, 1737, and was twice married, first to Hester Botsford who died April 25, 1800, and second to Mercy Isaacs. He was the father of eight children, descendants of some of whom still reside in Nova Scotia.

¶ The Exhortation.

DEARLY beloved in the Lord, ye that mind to come to the holy Communion of the body and blood of our Saviour Chriſt, muſt conſider how St. Paul exhorteth all perſons diligently to try and examine themſelves, before they preſume to eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. For as the benefit is great, if with a true penitent heart and lively faith we receive that holy ſacrament, (for then we ſpiritually eat the fleſh of Chriſt, and drink his blood; then we dwell in Chriſt, and Chriſt in us; we are one with Chriſt, and Chriſt with us;) ſo is the danger great, if we receive the ſame unworthily, not conſidering the Lord's body; for then we are guilty of the body and blood of Chriſt our Saviour; we kindle God's wrath againſt us, and bring his judgments upon us. Judge therefore yourſelves, brethren, that ye be not judged of the Lord; repent you truly for your ſins paſt;

have a lively and ſtedfast faith in Chriſt our Saviour; amend your lives, and be in perfect charity with all men: ſo ſhall ye be meet partakers of thoſe holy myſteries. And, above all things, ye muſt give moſt humble and hearty thanks to God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, for the redemption of the world, by the death and paſſion of our Saviour Chriſt, both God and man, who did humble himſelf even to the death upon the croſs for us miſerable ſinners, who lay in darkneſs and the ſhadow of death, that he might make us the children of God, and exalt us to everlaſting life. And to the end that we ſhould always remember the exceeding great love of our Maſter and only Saviour Jesus Chriſt thus dying for us, and the innumerable benefits which by his precious blood-ſhedding he hath obtained to us, he hath inſtituted and ordained holy myſteries, as pledges of his love, and for a continual remembrance of his death, to our great and endleſs comfort. To him, therefore, with the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt, let us give (as we are moſt bounden) continual thanks, ſubmitting ourſelves wholly to his holy will and pleasure, and ſtudying to ſerve him in true holiness and righteouſneſs all the days of our life. Amen.

¶ Then

¶ Then the Prieſt, or Deacon, ſhall ſay,

Let us preſent our offerings to the Lord with reverence and Godly fear.

¶ Then the Priest ſhall begin the offertory, ſaying one or more of theſe ſentences following, as he thinketh moſt convenient in his diſcretion.

IN proceſs of time it came to paſs, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord. And Abel, he alſo brought of the firſtlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof. And the Lord had reſpect unto Abel, and to his offering: but unto Cain and to his offering he had not reſpect. Gen. iv. 3, 4.

Speak unto the children of Iſrael, that they bring me an offering: of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart, ye ſhall take my offering. Exod. xxv. 2.

Ye ſhall not appear before the Lord empty. Every man ſhall give as he is able, according to the bleſſing of the Lord your God which he hath given you. Deut. xvi. 16, 17.

Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come into his courts. Pſal. xcvi. 8.

Lay not up for yourſelves treaſures upon earth, where moth and ruſt doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and ſteal: but lay up for yourſelves treaſures in heaven, where neither moth nor ruſt doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor ſteal. Mat. vi. 19, 20.

Not every one that ſaith unto me, Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the kingdom of heaven: but he that doth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Matth. vii. 21.

Jeſus ſat over againſt the treaſury, and beheld how the people caſt money into it: and many that were rich caſt in much. And there came a certain poor widow, and ſhe threw in two mites, which make a farthing. And he called unto him his diſciples, and ſaith unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, that this poor widow hath caſt more in, than all they which have caſt into the treaſury. For all they did caſt in of their abundance: but ſhe of her want did caſt in all that ſhe had, even all her living. Mark xii. 41, 42, 43, 44.

Who goeth a warfare at any time of his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? 1 Cor. ix. 7.

If we have ſown unto you ſpiritual things, is it a great matter if we ſhould reap your carnal things? 1 Cor. ix. 11.

Do ye not know, that they which miniſter about holy things, live of the ſacrifice? and they which wait at the altar, are partakers with with the altar? Even ſo hath the Lord ordained, that they who preach the goſpel, ſhould live of the goſpel. 1 Cor. ix. 13, 14.

He that ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reap alſo ſparingly: and he who ſoweth bountifully, ſhall reap alſo bountifully. Every man according as he purpoſeth in his heart, ſo let him give; not grudgingly, or of neceſſity: for God loveth a chearful giver. 2 Cor. ix. 6, 7.

Let him that is taught in the word, communicate unto him that teacheth, in all good things. Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatſoever a man ſoweth, that ſhall he alſo reap. Gal. vi. 6, 7.

Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor truſt in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy: That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to diſtribute, willing to communicate; laying up in ſtore for themſelves a good foundation againſt the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life. 1 Tim. vi. 17, 18, 19.

God is not unrighteous, to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have ſhewed toward his name, in that ye have miniſtered to the ſaints, and do miniſter. Heb. vi. 10.

To do good, and to communicate, forget not; for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed. Heb. xiii. 16.

¶ While

¶ While the Priest distinctly pronounceth some or all of these sentences for the offertory, the Deacon, or (if no such be present) some other fit person, shall receive the devotions of the people, in a bason provided for that purpose. And when all have offered, he shall reverently bring, and deliver it to the Priest; who shall humbly present it before the Lord, and set it upon the holy table, saying,

BLESSED be thou, O Lord God, for ever and ever. Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty; for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine: thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all: both riches and honour come of thee, and of thine own do we give unto thee. Amen.

¶ And the Priest shall then offer up, and place the bread and wine prepared for the sacrament upon the Lord's table, putting a little pure water into the cup: and shall say,

The Lord be with you.
Answer. And with thy spirit.
Priest. Lift up your hearts.
Answer. We lift them up unto the Lord.
Priest. Let us give thanks unto our Lord God.
Answer. It is meet and right so to do.
Priest. It is very meet, right, and our bounden bounden duty, that we should at all times, and in all places, give thanks unto thee O Lord, * [holy Father,] Almighty, everlasting God.

* These words (holy Father) must be omitted on Trinity-Sunday.

¶ Here shall follow the proper preface, according to the time, if there be any especially appointed; or else immediately shall follow, Therefore with angels and archangels, &c.

¶ Upon Christmas-day, and seven days after.

BECAUSE thou didst give Jesus Christ thine only Son, to be born * [as on this day] for us, who, by the operation of the Holy Ghost, was made very man, of the substance of the blessed Virgin Mary his mother, and that without spot of sin, to make us clean from all sin. Therefore with angels, &c.

* During the seven days after Christmas, say, as at this time.

¶ Upon Easter-day, and seven days after.

BUT chiefly are we bound to praise thee, for the glorious resurrection of thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord: For he is the very Paschal Lamb, which was offered for us, and hath taken away the sin of the world; who by his death hath destroyed death, and by his rising to life again, hath restored to us everlasting life. Therefore with angels, &c.

¶ Upon Aſcenſion-day, and ſeven days after.

THROUGH thy moſt dearly beloved Son, Jeſus Chriſt our Lord; who, after his moſt glorious reſurrection, manifeſtly appeared to all his apoſtles, and in their ſight aſcended up into heaven, to prepare a place for us; that where he is, thither might we alſo aſcend, and reign with him in glory. Therefore with angels and archangels, &c.

¶ Upon Whitſunday, and ſix days after.

THROUGH Jeſus Chriſt our Lord; according to whoſe moſt true promiſe the Holy Ghoſt came down * [as on this day] from heaven, with a ſudden great ſound, as it had been a mighty wind, in the likeneſs of fiery tongues, lighting upon the apoſtles, to teach them, and to lead them to all truth, giving them both the gift of divers languages, and alſo boldneſs with fervent zeal conſtantly to preach the goſpel unto all nations, whereby we are brought out of darkneſs and error into the clear light and true knowledge of thee, and of thy Son Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore with angels, &c.

* During the ſix days after Whitſunday, ſay, as at this time.

¶ Upon the feaſt of Trinity only.

WHO art one God, one Lord; not one only perſon, but three perſons in one ſubſtance. For that which we believe of the glory glory of the Father, the ſame we believe of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, without any difference or inequality. Therefore with angels, &c.

¶ After which prefaces ſhall follow immediately this doxology.

THEREFORE with angels and archangels, and with all the company of heaven, we laud and magnify thy glorious name, evermore praiſing thee, and ſaying, Holy, holy, holy Lord God of hoſts, heaven and earth are full of thy glory. Glory be to thee, O Lord moſt high. Amen.

¶ Then the Prieſt ſtanding at ſuch a part of the holy table as he may with the moſt eaſe and decency uſe both his hands, and ſhall ſay the prayer of conſecration, as followeth.

ALL glory be to thee, Almighty God, our heavenly Father, for that thou of thy tender mercy didſt give thy only Son Jeſus Chriſt to ſuffer death upon the croſs for our redemption; who made there (by his one oblation of himſelf once offered) a full, perfect, and ſufficient ſacrifice, oblation, and ſatisfaction, for the ſins of the whole world; and did inſtitute, and in his holy goſpel command us to continue a perpetual memory of that his precious death and ſacrifice until his coming again. For, in the night that he was betrayed, (a) he took bread; and when he had given thanks, thanks, (b) he brake it, and gave to his diſciples, ſaying, Take, eat, (c) THIS IS MY BODY, which is given for you: DO this in remembrance of me. Likewiſe after ſupper (d) he took the cup; and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them, ſaying, Drink ye all of this, for (e) THIS IS MY BLOOD, of the new teſtament, which is ſhed for you, and for many, for the remiſſion of ſins: DO this as oft as ye ſhall drink it in remembrance of me.

(b) And here to break the bread:

(c) And here to lay his hands upon all the bread.

(d) Here he is to take the cup into his hand:

(e) And here to lay his hand upon every veſſel (be it chalice or flagon) in which there is any wine to be conſecrated.

The Oblation. WHEREFORE, O Lord, and heavenly Father, according to the inſtitution of thy dearly beloved Son our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, we thy humble ſervants do celebrate and make here before thy divine majeſty, with theſe thy holy gifts, WHICH WE NOW OFFER UNTO THEE, the memorial thy Son hath commanded us to make; having in remembrance his bleſſed paſſion, and precious death, his mighty reſurrection, and glorious aſcenſion; rendering unto thee moſt hearty thanks for the innumerable benefits procured unto us by the ſame. The Invocation. And we moſt humbly beseech thee, O merciful Father, to hear us, and of thy almighty goodneſs neſs vouchſafe to bleſs and ſanctify, with thy word and Holy Spirit, theſe thy gifts and creatures of bread and wine, that they may become the body and blood of thy moſt dearly beloved Son. And we earneſtly desire thy fatherly goodneſs, mercifully to accept this our ſacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiving, moſt humbly beſeeching thee to grant, that by the merits and death of thy Son Jesus Chriſt, and through faith in his blood, we (and all thy whole church) may obtain remiſſion of our ſins, and all other benefits of his paſſion. And here we offer and preſent unto thee, O Lord, ourſelves, our ſouls and bodies, to be a reaſonable, holy and lively ſacrifice unto thee, humbly beſeeching thee, that we and all others who ſhall be partakers of this holy Communion, may worthily receive the moſt precious body and blood of thy Son Jeſus Chriſt, be filled with thy grace and heavenly benediction, and made one body with him, that he may dwell in them and they in him. And although we are unworthy, through our manifold ſins, to offer unto thee any ſacrifice; yet we beſeech thee to accept this our bounden duty and ſervice, not weighing our merits, but pardoning our offences, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord: by whom, and with whom, in the unity of the Holy Ghoſt, all honour and glory be unto thee, O Father Almighty, world without end. Amen.

¶ Let us pray for the whole ſtate of Chriſt's Church.

ALMIGHTY and everliving God, who by thy holy Apoſtle haſt taught us to make prayers and ſupplications, and to give thanks for all men; We humbly beseech thee moſt mercifully to accept our alms and oblations, and to receive theſe our prayers, which we offer unto thy divine majeſty; beſeeching thee to inſpire continually the univerſal church with the ſpirit of truth, unity and concord; and grant that all they who do confeſs thy holy name, may agree in the truth of thy holy word and live in unity and godly love. We beſeech thee also to ſave and defend all Chriſtian Kings, Princes, and Governors; and grant that they, and all who are in authority, may truly and impartially miniſter juſtice to the puniſhment of wickedneſs and vice, and to the maintenance of thy true religion and virtue. Give grace, O heavenly Father, to all Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, that they may both by their life and doctrine ſet forth thy true and lively word, and rightly and duly adminiſter thy holy ſacraments: and to all thy people give thy heavenly grace, that with meek heart, and due reverence, they may hear and receive thy holy word, truly ſerving thee in holineſs and righteouſneſs all the days of their life. And we commend eſpecially to thy merciful goodneſs the congregation here aſſembled aſſembled in thy name, to celebrate the commemoration of the moſt precious death and ſacrifice of thy Son and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. And we moſt humbly beſeech thee of thy goodneſs, O Lord, to comfort and ſuccour all thoſe who in this tranſitory life are in trouble, ſorrow, need, ſickneſs, or any other adverſity. And we alſo bleſs thy holy name for all thy ſervants, who, having finiſhed their courſe in faith, do now reſt from their labours: yielding unto thee moſt high praiſe and hearty thanks, for the wonderful goodneſs and virtue declared in all thy ſaints, who have been the choice veſſels of thy grace, and the lights of the world in their ſeveral generations: moſt humbly beſeeching thee to give us grace to follow the example of their ſtedfaſtneſs in thy faith, and obedience to thy holy commandments, that at the day of the general reſurrection, we, and all they who are of the myſtical body of thy Son, may be ſet on his right hand, and hear that his moſt joyful voice, Come, ye bleſſed of my father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Grant this, O Father, for Jeſus Chriſt's ſake, our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen.

As our Saviour Chriſt hath commanded and taught us, we are bold to ſay,

OUR Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our treſpaſſes, as we forgive them that treſpaſs againſt us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

¶ Then ſhall the Prieſt ſay to them that come to receive the holy communion, this invitation.

YE that do truly and earneſtly repent you of your ſins, and are in love and charity with your neighbours, and intend to lead a new life, following the commandments of God, and walking from henceforth in his holy ways: Draw near with faith and take this holy ſacrament to your comfort; and make your humble confeſſion to Almighty God.

¶ Then ſhall this general confeſſion be made, by the people, along with the Prieſt; all humbly kneeling upon their knees.

ALMIGHTY God, Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, maker of all things, judge of all men; We acknowledge and bewail our manifold ſins and wickedneſs, which we from time to time moſt grievious̄ly have committed, by thought, word, and deed, againſt thy divine Majeſty; provoking moſt juſtly thy wrath and indignation againſt us. We do earneſtly repent, and are heartily ſorry for theſe our miſdoings; the remembrance of them is grievous unto us; the burden of them is is intolerable. Have mercy upon us, have mercy upon us, moſt merciful Father; for thy Son our Lord Jeſus Chriſt's ſake, forgive us all that is paſt; and grant, that we may ever hereafter ſerve and pleaſe thee, in newneſs of life, to the honour and glory of thy name, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Amen.

¶ Then ſhall the Prieſt, or the Biſhop, (being preſent,) ſtand up, and turning himſelf to the people, pronounce the abſolution as followeth.

ALMIGHTY God our heavenly Father, who, of his great mercy, hath promiſed forgiveneſs of ſins to all them that with hearty repentance and true faith turn unto him; Have mercy upon you; pardon and deliver you from all your ſins; confirm and ſtrengthen you in all goodneſs; and bring you to everlaſting life, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Amen.

¶ Then ſhall the Prieſt ſay,

Hear what comfortable words our Saviour Chriſt ſaith unto all that truly turn to him:

COME unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will refreſh you. Matth. ix. 28.

Private ejaculation.

Refreſh, O Lord, thy ſervant wearied with the burden of ſin.

God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. John iii. 16.

Private ejaculation.

Lord, I believe in thy Son Jeſus Chriſt, and let this faith purify me from all iniquity.

Hear alſo what St. Paul ſaith.

This is a faithful ſaying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the world to ſave ſinners. 1 Tim. i. 15.

Private ejaculation.

I embrace with all thankfulneſs that ſalvation that Jeſus has brought into the world.

Hear alſo what St. John ſaith.

If any man ſin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous: and he is the propitiation for our ſins. 1 John ii. 1, 2.

Private ejaculation.

Intercede for me, O bleſſed Jeſu! that my ſins may be pardoned, through the merits of thy death.

¶ Then ſhall the Prieſt, turning him to the altar, kneel down, and ſay, in the name of all them that ſhall communicate, this collect of humble acceſs to the holy communion, as followeth.

WE do not preſume to come to this thy holy table, O merciful Lord, truſting in our own righteouſneſs, but in thy manifold and great mercies. We are not worthy ſo much as to gather up the crumbs under thy table: But thou art the ſame Lord, whoſe property is always to have mercy. Grant us therefore, gracious Lord, ſo to eat the fleſh of of thy dear Son Jeſus Chriſt, and to drink his blood, that our ſinful bodies may be made clean by his moſt ſacred body, and our ſouls waſhed through his moſt precious blood, and that we may evermore dwell in him, and he in us. Amen.

¶ Then ſhall the Biſhop, if he be preſent, or elſe the Prieſt that celebrateth, firſt receive the communion in both kinds himſelf, and next deliver it to other Biſhops, Preſbyters, and Deacons, (if there be any preſent,) and after to the people in due order, all humbly kneeling. And when he receiveth himself, or delivereth the ſacrament of the body of Chriſt to others, he ſhall ſay,

THE body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which was given for thee, preſerve thy ſoul and body unto everlaſting life.

¶ Here the perſon receiving ſhall ſay, Amen.

¶ And when the Prieſt receiveth the cup himſelf, or delivereth it to others, he ſhall ſay,

THE blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which was ſhed for thee, preſerve thy ſoul and body unto everlaſting life.

¶ Here the perſon receiving ſhall ſay, Amen.

¶ If the conſecrated bread or wine be all ſpent before all have communicated, the Prieſt is to conſecrate more, according to the form before preſcribed, beginning at the words, All glory glory be to thee, &c. and ending with the words, that they may become the body and blood of thy moſt dearly beloved Son.

¶ When all have communicated, he that celebrates ſhall go to the Lord's table, and cover with a fair linen cloth that which remaineth of the conſecrated elements, and then ſay,

Having

Private Devotions for the Altar.

BLESSED Jeſus! Saviour of the world! who haſt called me to the participation of theſe thy holy myſteries, accept my humble approach to thy ſacred table, increase my faith, ſettle my devotion, fix my contemplation on thy powerful mercy; and while with my mouth I receive the ſacred ſymbols of thy body and blood, may they be the means of heavenly nouriſhment to prepare my body and ſoul for that everlaſting life which thou haſt purchaſed by thy merits, and promiſed to beſtow on all who believe in and depend on thee. Amen.

Prayer to God.

O Gracious and merciful God, Thou ſupreme Being, Father, Word and Holy Ghoſt, look down from heaven, the throne of thy eſſential glory, upon me thy unworthy creature, with the eyes of thy covenanted mercy and compaſſion: O Lord my God, I diſclaim all merit, I renounce all righteouſneſs of my own, either inherent in my nature, or acquired by my own induſtry: And I fly for refuge, for pardon and ſactification, to the righteouſneſs of thy Chriſt: For his ſake, for the ſake of the bleſſed Jeſus, the Son of thy covenanted love, whom Thou haſt ſet forth to be a propitiation for fallen man, and in whom alone Thou art well pleaſed, have mercy

Having now received the precious body and blood of Chriſt, let us give thanks to our Lord God, who hath graciouſly vouchſafed to admit us to the participation of his holy myſteries; and let us beg of him grace to perform our vows, and to perſevere in our good reſolutions; that being made holy, we may obtain everlaſting life, through the merits of the all-ſufficient ſacrifice of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

Then

mercy upon me, receive my prayers, pardon my infirmities, ſtrengthen my weak reſolutions, guide my ſteps to thy holy altar, and there feed me with the meat which periſheth not, but endureth to everlaſting life. Amen.

After Receiving.

BLESSED Jeſus! Thou haſt now bleſt me with the food of thy own merciful inſtitution, and, in humble faith of thy gracious promiſe, I have bowed myſelf at thy table, to receive the precious pledges of thy dying love; O may thy preſence go with me from this happy participation of thy goodneſs, that when I return to the neceſſary labours and employments of this miſerable world, I may be enabled by thy grace to obey thy commandments, and conducted by thy watchful care through all trials, till, according to thy divine wiſdom, I have finiſhed my courſe here with joy, that ſo I may depart out of this world in peace, and in a ſtedfaſt dependence on thy merits, O bleſſed Jeſus, in whoſe prevailing words I ſhut up all my imperfect wiſhes, ſaying,

Our Father, &c. Amen.

¶ Then the Prieſt ſhall ſay this collect of thankſgiving, as followeth.

ALMIGHTY and everliving God, we moſt heartily thank thee, for that thou doſt vouchſafe to feed us, who have duly received theſe holy myſteries, with the ſpiritual food of the moſt precious body and blood of thy Son our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; and doth aſſure us thereby of thy favour and goodneſs towards us, and that we are very members incorporate in the myſtical body of thy Son, which is the bleſſed company of all faithful people, and are alſo heirs through hope of thy everlaſting kingdom, by the merits of his moſt precious death and paſſion. We now moſt humbly beſeech thee, O heavenly Father, ſo to aſſiſt us with thy grace and Holy Spirit, that we may continue in that holy communion and fellowſhip, and do all ſuch good works as thou haſt commanded us to walk in, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord; to whom, with Thee and the Holy Ghoſt, be all honour and glory, world without end. Amen.

¶ Then ſhall be ſaid or ſung, Gloria in excelſis, as followeth.

GLORY be to God on high, and in earth peace, good will towards men. We praiſe thee, we bleſs thee, we worſhip thee, we glorify thee, we give thanks to thee, for thy great glory, O Lord God, heavenly King, God

God the Father Almighty; and to Thee, O God, the only begotten Son Jeſu Chriſt; and to Thee, O God, the Holy Ghoſt.

O Lord, the only begotten Son Jeſu Chriſt; O Lord God, Lamb of God, Son of the Father, who takeſt away the ſins of the world, have mercy upon us. Thou that takeſt away the ſins of the world, receive our prayer. Thou that ſitteſt at the right hand of God the Father, have mercy upon us.

For thou only art holy, thou only art the Lord, thou only, O Chriſt, with the Holy Ghoſt, art moſt high in the glory of God the Father. Amen.

¶ Then the Prieſt, or Biſhop, if he be preſent, ſhall let them depart, with this bleſſing.

THE peace of God, which paſſeth all underſtanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord: and the bleſſing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt be amongſt you, and remain with you always. Amen.

THE END.

HISTORICAL SKETCH AND NOTES.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

On the twenty-third Sunday after Trinity, November 14th, 1784, at the chapel in Bishop Skinner's house in Longacre, Aberdeen, "in the presence of a considerable number of respectable clergymen, and a great number of laity," Dr. Samuel Seabury was consecrated Bishop of Connecticut, by the Rt. Rev. Messrs. Kilgour, Petrie, and Skinner, Bishops of the Episcopal Church in Scotland. On the following day a "Concordate" between the Church in Scotland and that in Connecticut was agreed upon, and signed and sealed by the four Bishops. Of this Concordate the fifth article is in the following words:

"Art. V. As the Celebration of the holy Eucharist, or the Administration of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ, is the principal Bond of Union among Christians, as well as the most solemn Act of Worship in the Christian Church, the Bishops aforesaid agree in desiring that there may be as little Variance here as possible; and tho' the Scottish Bishops are very far from prescribing to their Brethren in this matter, they cannot help ardently wishing that Bishop Seabury would endeavour all he can, consistently with peace and prudence, to make the Celebration of this venerable Mystery conformable to the most primitive Doctrine and Practice in that respect: Which is the pattern the Church of Scotland has copied after in her Communion Office, and which it has been the Wish of some of the most eminent Divines of the Church of England, that she also had more closely followed than she seems to have done since she gave up her first reformed Liturgy, used in the Reign of King Edward VI., between which, and the form used in the Church of Scotland, there is no Difference in any point, which the primitive Church reckoned essential to the right Ministration of the holy Eucharist. In this capital Article therefore of the Eucharistic Service, in which the Scottish Bishops so earnestly wish for as much Unity as possible, Bishop Seabury also agrees to take a serious View of the Communion Office recommended by them, and if found agreeable to the genuine Standards of Antiquity, to give his Sanction to it, and by gentle Methods of Argument and Persuasion, to endeavour, as they have done, to introduce it by degrees into practice, without the Compulsion of Authority on the one side, or the prejudice of former Custom on the other."[1]

The clergy of Connecticut assembled in Convocation at Middletown, on the 2d day of August, 1785, and gave their Bishop a hearty welcome. We are told that when the Concordate, with the accompanying letter from the Scotch Bishops, was laid before the clergy, it excited in them the warmest sentiments of gratitude and esteem.[2] At this meeting the Rev. Messrs. Bowden and Jarvis of Connecticut and the Rev. Mr. Parker of Boston were appointed a committee to act with the Bishop in proposing such changes in the Prayer-Book as should be thought needful. The committee met immediately and agreed upon certain alterations. Part of these were reserved to be reported to the next meeting of Convocation, which was to be held at New Haven in September[3]; but the changes in the state prayers were published at once by the Bishop in the following pastoral letter:

SAMUEL, by divine permiſſion, Biſhop of the Epiſcopal Church in the State of Connecticut, to the Clergy of the ſaid Church, GREETING.

IT having pleaſed Almighty GOD, that the late Britiſh Colony of Connecticut ſhould become a free, ſovereign and independent State, as it now is, ſome alterations in the Liturgy and Offices of our Church are neceſſary to be made, to accommodate them to the civil Conſtitution of the country in which we live; for the peace, ſecurity and proſperity of which, both as good ſubjects and faithful Chriſtians, it is our duty conſtantly to pray——WE, the Biſhop aforeſaid, have thought fit, by and with the advice and aſſiſtance of ſuch of our Clergy as we have had opportunity of conſulting, to iſſue this Injunction, hereby authoriſing and requiring YOU, and every one of You, the Preſbyters and Deacons of the Church above mentioned, in the celebration of Divine Service, to make the following alterations in the Liturgy and Offices of our Church, viz.

I. In the ſuffrages after the Creed, in morning and evening Prayer, inſtead of O Lord ſave the King, You are to read, O Lord ſave the Church; to which the congregation are to make the accuſtomed reſponſe, And mercifully hear us, &c.

II. The prayer for the King, in the morning and evening ſervice, to be left out; and the prayer for the Royal Family to be thus altered; Almighty God, the fountain of all goodneſs, we humbly beſeech thee to bleſs the Governor and Rulers of this State; endue them with thy Holy Spirit;—and ſo on as it now ſtands.

III. In the Litany the 15, 16, 17, 18th petitions to be omitted, and the petition for Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, immediately to follow that for the univerſal Church. The 20, and 21ſt petitions to be thus read, That it may pleaſe thee to endue the Governor and Rulers of this State, with grace, wiſdom and underſtanding. That it may pleaſe thee to bleſs and keep the Judges and inferior Magiſtrates, giving them grace to execute juſtice and to maintain truth. To both which the uſual reſponſe---We beſeech thee to hear us, good Lord,--- is to be made by the congregation.

IV. In the prayer for the whole ſtate of Chriſt's Church, the part relating to Rulers and Miniſters to be thus altered---We beſeech thee alſo to ſave and defend all Chriſtian Kings, Princes, and Governors; and grant that they, and all that are put in authority, may truly and impartially miniſter juſtice, to the puniſhment of wickedneſs and vice, and to the maintenance of true religion and virtue. Give grace, O heavenly Father, to all Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, that they may- - -and so on, as it now stands.

V. The prayers for the King that ſtand before the Nicene Creed in the Communion ſervice, to be omitted.

The Convention of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and New Hampshire met at Boston, on the 7th of September, having before them the report of the committee appointed at Middletown in August. The changes in the state prayers were adopted, with the characteristic substitution of "Commonwealth" for "State," and recommended for immediate use. A considerable number of other alterations were also agreed to, but it was voted that their use should be postponed in order that it might be seen how far the other States would conform to them.[1] Dr. Parker, writing to Bishop Seabury on the 12th of September, says that this Convention adopted most of the changes proposed at Middletown, with a few others; the changes of any importance to which assent was not given, being expressly stated to be the omission of the second Lesson in the Morning Service, and that of the Gospel and the Exhortation in the Baptismal-Office.[1] In the lack of records of the early Convocations of Connecticut, we look to the journal of the Massachusetts Convention for an account of suggested alterations; and it is noticeable that the only changes proposed in the Communion-Office were the omission of the Lord's Prayer at the beginning, the omission of the prayers for the King, a different petition for rulers in the prayer for the Church Militant, somewhat different phraseology in the first Warning and the first Exhortation, and a permission to repeat the sentences at administration but once for all then present at the altar.[2] It is evident, therefore, that Bishop Seabury took no steps in 1785 to introduce the Scotch Liturgy. The Massachusetts Convention was kept under adjournments until July 20th, 1786, and at last it was left to the discretion of the different parishes to adopt the alterations or to retain the old liturgy.[3]

Bishop Seabury sent a copy of the substitutes for the state prayers to Dr. (afterwards Bishop) White, of Philadelphia, under date of August 19, 1785, with the words: "Should more be done, it must be a work of time and great deliberation."[4] And in fact, the clergy of Connecticut were found unwilling to agree to any other alterations in the Prayer-Book. Especially when the convention of the states to the south of New England met at Philadelphia, September 27th to October 7th, 1785, and prepared the book since known as the "Proposed Book," the Churchmen of Connecticut were alarmed. Mr. Parker had hoped that the meeting at Philadelphia would go no further than his own convention had gone; but he evidently felt aggrieved that the clergy of Connecticut were not willing to go so far. Bishop Seabury wrote to him, November 28th, 1785, as follows:

"Between the time of our parting at Middletown and the clerical meeting at New Haven, it was found that the Church people in Connecticut were much alarmed at the thoughts of any considerable alterations being made in the Prayer Book; and upon the whole, it was judged best that no alterations should be attempted at present, but to wait till a little time shall have cooled down the tempers and conciliated the affections of people to each other. And since the convention at Philadelphia, which, as report says, has abrogated two creeds and nineteen articles, and taken great liberties with the prayers, &c., we are more apprehensive of proceeding to any alterations."[1]

This Proposed Book was published in the spring of 1786.[2] On the 22nd of September in the same year, Bishop Seabury delivered his second charge to his clergy assembled in Convocation at Derby. In it he said:

"It is always a disagreeable task to be obliged to mention any matter with censure, or even disapprobation; and I am very happy that the measure of which I am now to take notice can call for animadversion only by way of caution. A number of Clergy and Laity in the southern States have undertaken to revise and alter the Liturgy and Offices and Government of the Church, and have exhibited a Prayer-book to the public. The time will not permit me to say anything of the merit of the alterations in the Liturgy; but, I am persuaded, by an unprejudiced mind, some of them will be thought for the worse, most of them not for the better. But the authority on which they have acted is unknown in the Episcopal Church. The government of the Church by Bishops we hold to have been established by the Apostles, acting under the commission of Christ and the direction of the Holy Ghost; and therefore is not to be altered by any power on earth, nor indeed by an angel from heaven. This government they have degraded by lodging the chief authority in a Convention of clerical and lay Delegates, making their Church Episcopal in its orders, but Presbyterian in its government.

"Liturgies are left more to the prudence and judgment of the governors of the Church; and the primitive practice seems to have been that the Bishop did, with the advice no doubt of his Presbyters, provide a Liturgy for the use of his diocess. This ought to have been the case here. Bishops should first have been obtained to preside over those Churches. And to those Bishops, with the Proctors of the Clergy, should have been committed the business of compiling a Liturgy for the use of the Church throughout the states. This would have ensured unity in doctrine, worship, and discipline through the whole, which upon the present plan will either not be obtained, or, if obtained, will not be durable. And should we ever be so happy, through the merciful providence of God, as to obtain such a meeting, great regard ought to be had to the primitive Liturgies and Forms, in compiling a book of Common-Prayer."[1]

At this Convocation, Bishop Seabury, acting on the principles which he had thus laid down, set forth the Communion-Office which is reprinted in the foregoing pages, and "recommended" it "to the Episcopal Congregations in Connecticut."[1] This office was taken, with certain alterations which will presently be noticed in detail, from that which was then in use in the Scotch Church. This latter is said to have been compiled by Bishops Forbes and Falconer, and was first published in 1764. Hall says that it "may be considered as the second standard edition"; the first having been Bishop Gadderer's edition of 1743, which was recognized by the canons of that year,[2] as the edition of 1764 (reprinted in 1765) was by later canons.[3]

The first Scotch Prayer-Book was that published in 1637, under the direction of King Charles I.[4] It is

The manuscript records of Convocation do not begin till 1790, when the secretary was directed to procure a blank-book in which to record the minutes. Space was left at the beginning of the book as if to insert the minutes of former meetings, but this was never done. It seems, from a letter of the Rev. Roger Viets of Simsbury to the Rev. Mr. Parker of Boston, that the Convocation which met at Wallingford on the 27th of February in the next year (1787) took steps towards setting forth for the use of the Church in Connecticut a complete edition of the Prayer-Book. It was at this Convocation that a Coadjutor was elected to Bishop Seabury; but the union of the dioceses in the country made his consecration unnecessary.

frequently called by the name of Archbishop Laud, who was appointed, together with Bishops Juxon and Wren, to examine and revise a draft which had been prepared in Scotland, the chief compilers being Maxwell, Bishop of Ross, and Wedderburn of Dunblane.[1] The chief variations from the English book which was then in use (that of 1559) were in the Communion-Office. The prayer for the Church Militant and the prayer of Consecration were more nearly conformed to the first book of Edward VI. than to that of Elizabeth, the words of Institution being preceded by an Invocation and followed by an Oblation, an Intercession, and the Lord's Prayer. The words at the delivery of the elements were also the same as in 1549. The only variation in order between the proposed Scotch liturgy and that then in use in England, was that the prayer of Humble Access was placed after the prayer of Consecration.

The Prayer-Book of 1637, as is well known, was at once withdrawn; but the subsequent Scotch Communion-Offices were to some extent modelled upon that contained in it. Changes, however, began to be made in the order of the several parts of the service; and in 1735 Gadderer's book appeared, having the order which was contained in the book of 1764 and in Bishop Seabury's office, except that the Offertory preceded the Exhortation, and that, in the prayer of Consecration, the Invocation preceded the words of Institution. The words of Institution, the Oblation, and the Invocation had appeared in this their primitive and true order, for the first time in any service-book in the English language, in Stephens's "Liturgy of the Ancient Christians," about the year 1700[1]; and this order is found also in the Non-Jurors' book of 1718, in Deacon's Liturgy of 1734, in Rattray's of 1744, and in a Scotch office of 1755, to which that of 1764 is in every respect in close resemblance.[2]

The following collation shows the changes which Bishop Seabury introduced into the Scotch office of 1764. Every difference in words has been noted; only unimportant changes in punctuation and in the use of capitals have been omitted.

It may be of interest to add that the Scotch Communion-Office has remained almost without change since 1764. The edition published by the Rev. John Skinner of Forfar (son of the Bishop of Aberdeen), in 1800,[2] and reprinted by him in his "Scotch Communion-Office Illustrated," in 1807, differs from it only in the insertion of the words "and oblations" and the name of the Sovereign in the prayer for the Church, the change of "who" into "which" in the Lord's Prayer, the addition of "meekly kneeling upon your knees" to the Invitation, the insertion of "and" before "our souls" in the prayer of Humble Access, and the change of "soul and body" into "body and soul" in the words of administration. Bishop Torry's Prayer-Book, published in Edinburgh in 1849,[1] besides prefixing an "Ante-Communion Service" (of which more will be said presently), makes the same changes except that in the Invitation, begins a new paragraph in the Trisagion at the word "Holy," and does the same in the Prayer of Consecration at the beginning of the Invocation and of each of the two following petitions. As at present printed for use, the Scotch Communion-Office prefixes an "Ante-Communion Service," and agrees in other respects with the edition of 1800 and 1807, except that the Trisagion is printed in two paragraphs, the prayer of Consecration in nine, and the prayer for the Church in nine.

Although the old Scotch Communion-Offices begin with the Exhortation, we have the testimony of Mr. Skinner in a note to Bishop Horsley's Collation of Offices, which forms an appendix to his "Scotch Communion-Office Illustrated," that an introductory service was used; and the form which is given agrees substantially with that in the two services mentioned at the end of the last paragraph. This latter form differs from that in the

[1] The history of this book should be read in Neale's Life of Bishop Torry, chaps. vii. and viii.; in the appendix to which it is collated with the book of 1637, the Non-Jurors' office, and the received Scotch form (that of 1764).

English book in allowing our Lord's summary of the Law followed by a versicle to be read instead of the Ten Commandments with their versicles; in providing the collect for grace and strength to keep the Commandments, its use being discretionary with one of the two collects for the Sovereign; and in instructing the people to say when the Gospel is announced, "Glory be to Thee, O God," and at its end, "Thanks be to Thee, O Lord, for this Thy glorious Gospel."[1] It is probable that Bishop Seabury and his clergy used the "Ante-Communion Service" of the English Book; for in a folio English Prayer-Book which was used by the Bishop in St. James's Church, New London, after the Revolution, is our present prayer for the civil authority, written out and pasted over the prayer for the Sovereign which follows the Commandments.[2]

Bishop Seabury's Communion-Office seems to have been almost, if not quite, universally adopted by the clergy of Connecticut. We are told that they "became very much attached to it, not only from the recommend-

[1] Bishop Torry's edition, following that of 1637, directs the Priest to say, "Here endeth the Holy Gospel"; but there is no such direction in the later edition. There were two sets of rubrics in 1637, one in the usual place, and the other before and after the Gospel for the First Sunday in Advent.

[2] Dr. Hallam's Annals of St. James's Church, p. 72. The first Church in New London was burned in 1781, and the second was not finished till 1787. There is a tradition that, while Bishop Seabury officiated in the Court-House, he celebrated the Holy Communion every Sunday after morning prayer, in the large parlor of the house in which he lived. ation of their Bishop, but from the conviction that this order was in more exact conformity [than the English liturgy] with the earliest usage of the Christian Church."[1] Its general use probably ceased when the American Book of Common Prayer began to be used, October 1st, 1790; but, as will be noted below, it was employed by some of the clergy at a much later date.

A "General Convention" assembled at Philadelphia, July 28th, 1789. On the 5th day of August, on motion of the Rev. Dr. William Smith of Maryland, it was voted (inter alia) that "it be proposed to the churches in the New England states to meet the churches of these states, with the said three Bishops [the Rt. Rev. Drs. White, Provoost, and Seabury], in an adjourned Convention, to settle certain articles of union among all the churches."[2] The clergy of Connecticut met on the 15th of September, and on the next day they elected the Rev. Messrs. Hubbard and Jarvis their delegates to the adjourned convention. They were "empowered to confer with the General Convention on the subject of making alterations in the Book of Common Prayer; but the ratification of such alterations was expressly reserved, to rest with the Bishop and clergy of the Church."[3] The Convention assembled on the 29th of September, and it was divided into two houses on the 3d of October. One of the first votes of the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies ordered the appointment of a committee "to prepare an order for the administration of the Holy Communion." This committee reported on the 9th, one day after the House of Bishops (the Rt. Rev. Drs. Seabury and White) had "prepared their proposals" on this service. On the 13th, the lower house agreed to the report of their committee on the Communion Service; and on the 14th, the proposed service was sent to the Bishops, who at once made amendments and returned it. The lower house concurred in all the amendments except one, which was immediately withdrawn by the Bishops; and thus both houses agreed to the present American Communion-Office on the 14th day of October, 1789.[1]

That it was owing to Bishop Seabury that the Prayer of Consecration in that office followed the Scotch model is beyond a question. In a letter which he wrote to Bishop White, under date of June 29, 1789, after criticizing the action of the Philadelphia Convention in other matters, he had written as follows:

"That the most exceptionable part of the English book is the Communion Office may be proved by a number of very respectable names among her Clergy. The grand fault in that office is the deficiency of a more formal oblation of the elements, and of the invocation of the Holy Ghost to sanctify and bless them. The Consecration is made to consist merely in the Priest's laying his hands on the elements and pronouncing 'This is my body,' &c., which words are not consecration at all, nor were they addressed by Christ to the Father, but were declarative to the Apostles. This is so exactly symbolizing with the Church of Rome in an error; an error, too, on which the absurdity of Transubstantiation is built, that nothing but having fallen into the same error themselves, could have prevented the enemies of the Church from casting it in her teeth. The efficacy of Baptism, of Confirmation, of Orders, is ascribed to the Holy Ghost, and His energy is implored for that purpose; and why He should not be invoked in the consecration of the Eucharist, especially as all the old Liturgies are full to the point, I cannot conceive. It is much easier to account for the alterations of the first Liturgy of Edward the VI., than to justify them; and as I have been told there is a vote on the minutes of your Convention, anno 1786, I believe, for the revision of this matter, I hope it will be taken up, and that God will raise up some able and worthy advocate for this primitive practice, and make you and the Convention the instruments of restoring it to His Church in America. It would do you more honor in the world, and contribute more to the union of the churches than any other alterations you can make, and would restore the Holy Eucharist to its ancient dignity and efficacy."[1]

[1] Journal of Convention.

The strength of Bishop Seabury's convictions on this subject appeared when, on the morning of Sunday, the 11th of October, during the session of the Convention, Bishop White asked him to consecrate the elements, and he twice declined, saying the second time in a pleasant manner: "To confess the truth, I hardly consider the form to be used [that of the English book] as strictly amounting to a consecration."[2]

"It may perhaps be expected," says Bishop White, "that the great change made in restoring to the consecration prayer the oblatory words and the invocation of the Holy Spirit, left out in King Edward's reign, must at least have produced an opposition. But no such thing happened to any considerable extent; or at least, the author did not hear of any in the other house, further than a disposition to the effect in a few gentlemen, which was counteracted by some pertinent remarks of the president. In that of the bishops, it lay very near to the heart of Bishop Seabury. As for the other bishop [Bishop White himself], without conceiving with some, that the service as it stood was essentially defective, he always thought there was a beauty in those ancient forms, and can discover no superstition in them."[1] He then goes on to explain how in the first edition of the new book the words "which we now offer unto thee" were printed, as in the Scotch office, in small capitals; though in all succeeding editions[2] they were, as was intended, in the same type as the rest of the prayer.

The president of the lower house, whose pertinent remarks are said by Bishop White to have counteracted some disposition to raise objections to the change proposed, was the Rev. Dr. William Smith, who has been mentioned above. Dr. Smith was a native of Scotland, who had been ordained to the diaconate and the priesthood at the same time and place as Bishop Seabury. On grounds which need not be mentioned here, he "had been opposed to the non-juring bishops in Scotland communicating the Episcopate to Connecticut; and he had said some things not very complimentary to the candidate from this State, in his steps to reach the apostolic office."[1] But, as we have seen, he had proposed the invitation to the Bishop and Clergy of Connecticut; he entertained the Bishop during his stay in Philadelphia; and tradition has it that, when certain members of the lower house were beginning to object to the prayer of Consecration which was proposed by the Bishops, he reproved them for finding fault with something which they had not heard, and thereupon read the prayer with so impressive a tone and manner that the objections were no further urged. The form, says Dr. Jarvis, "was admitted without opposition, and in silence if not in reverence."[2] It is, then, to Bishop Seabury and Dr. Smith that the Church in this country is indebted for its prayer of Consecration in the Communion-Office.

[1] Ibid., p. 154.

[2] This is not quite accurate. The small capitals appear in the editions of both 1790 and 1791. Rev. Frederick Gibson's Historical Essay, p. 23. In the first edition of the Prayer-Book, the words in the Apostles' Creed, "He descended into hell," are enclosed in brackets; but it is only in Evening Prayer that they are printed in italics; in Morning Prayer and the Visitation of the Sick they are in ordinary type. Bp. White's statement (Memoirs, p. 151) needs this correction.

It was probably owing to the influence of the delegation from Maryland that the wording of the Invocation was changed from that in the Scotch office to that which we now use. Writing to the Rev. Mr. Parker of Boston, April 17th, 1786, Dr. Smith says that the Maryland Convention, having the "Proposed Book" under consideration, had decided to recommend "an addition to the Consecration Prayer, in the Holy Communion, something analogous to that of the Liturgy of Edward VI. and the Scots' Liturgy, invoking a blessing on the Elements of Bread and Wine," changing the prayer "that they may become the body and blood, etc." to "that we receiving the same, according to Thy Son, our Saviour Jesus Christ's holy Institution, etc." He adds: "This I think will be a proper amendment, and it perfectly satisfies such of our Clergy and people as were attached to the Scots' and other ancient Liturgies, all of which have an Invocation of a blessing on the Elements, as is, indeed, most proper."[1]

It may be worth while to note that both the Concordate quoted at the beginning of this sketch, and Bishop Seabury's letter, as well as Bishop White's words in his Memoirs, seem to imply that, in the opinion of the writers, the first Liturgy of Edward VI. and the Scotch office contained prayers of Consecration which were substantially the same; whereas in fact the Invocation in the first Book of Edward VI. stands in an anomalous place, followed as it is by the words of Institution, and that by [1] Doc. Hist. Conn., i. 291. The vote of the Convention is printed in the appendix to the Journal of Maryland, 1855, p. 18. It is very interesting to note that the latter part of this form had been proposed in the draft of a Prayer-Book made in Scotland in the reign of King James (probably in 1619) and sent to London not later than 1629. Sprott, pp. xxxiv., lxx., 72. The prayer of Invocation, says this author, "is thought essential by the [Presbyterian] Church of Scotland, and to this day the want of it in the English Prayer-Book is spoken of among us as a very serious defect." Ibid., p. lxviii. Dr. Sancroft proposed a form almost identical with that adopted in 1789. Bulley's Variations, p. 191. Both phrases were used in 1637, the first having the form "that they may be unto us the body and bloud of Thy most dearly beloved Son." The Rev. William Smith of Stepney Parish, Md., as appears from a letter written in 1785, was in the habit of using the Scotch office, and persisted in it in spite of the objections of Dr. William Smith.

the Oblation; while in the Scotch Book the order is that of the ancient Liturgies, as was noted above. Its compilers used the words of the book of 1549, but they put them in the order which they knew to have the sanction of antiquity.

Such was the great point in which Bishop Seabury's liturgy influenced the formation of the Communion-Office which is still, by God's good providence, used throughout the Church in the United States. It is thought that this influence may be traced in another matter which, though it is by no means of equal importance, is yet worthy of careful consideration.

In the first Prayer-Book of King Edward VI., it was provided that if the sermon did not contain an exhortation to the people "to the worthy receiving of the holy Sacrament of the body and blood of our Saviour Christ," the curate should give an exhortation to those that were minded to receive the same; and this exhortation, which is nearly word for word the same that is still used in the Communion Service, beginning "Dearly beloved in the Lord," was followed by the Offertory. Then, if there was no Communion, the Priest was instructed to say one or two collects and to dismiss the people with the accustomed blessing. But if there was a Communion, it was ordered that those who intended to partake of it should "tarry still in the quire or in some convenient place nigh the quire," and that all others should "depart out of the quire except the Ministers and Clerks." The prayer for the Church, it may be noted, came after the Trisagion. In 1552 the prayer for the Church was placed immediately after the Offertory, and the Minister was instructed, when there was no Communion, to say "all that is appointed at the Communion till the end of the homily, concluding with the general prayer for the whole estate of Christ's Church militant here in earth, and one or more collects." The same rubric was repeated in 1559 and in 1604; in 1662 it was made more explicit, requiring that everything should be said to the end of the general prayer, and that the Blessing should be given after the Collects. It was at this point in the service, then, that non-communicants were expected to withdraw from the Church.[1] But in the Non-jurors' Book of 1718, the Offertory is placed after the Exhortation, which is addressed to the communicants, and is closely followed, as in the later Scotch services, by the Trisagion; and at the end of the service, there is the following important rubric: "After the Sermon or Homily is ended, (or, if there be no Sermon or Homily, after the Nicene Creed is ended,) if there be no Communion, the Priest shall turn to the people, and say, Let us pray. And then, turning to the Altar, he shall stand before it, and say one or more of these Collects last before rehearsed, concluding with the Blessing." The other Scotch offices which are reprinted in Hall's Fragmenta Liturgica contain no part of the service to be used before the Sermon, and give no instructions as to what shall be done when there is no Communion, it being evidently considered that all that is printed is, as is expressly said on the title-pages, the Communion-office "as far as concerneth the Ministration of that Holy Sacrament." The editions of 1724 and 1743 begin with the Offertory; but that of 1755[1] and all that follow begin with the Exhortation; and on the reverse of the title-page of the edition of 1844, we find: "The Catechumens and other Non-Communicants being dismissed, the Holy Office proceedeth as here set forth." Bishop Torry's Prayer-Book has this rubric: "Then shall follow the Sermon; and when the Holy Eucharist is to be celebrated, the Minister shall dismiss the non-communicants in these or like words, Let those who are not to communicate now depart." It would appear, then, as well from express directions in books which Bishop Seabury followed or which were based on those that he followed, as from the structure of the office which he set forth, that none but communicants were supposed to be present at the time of the Offertory; and if not at that time, then certainly not at the offering of the prayer for the Church, which invariably occupies a later place in the service.[2]

Now bearing these facts in mind, it certainly seems that the changes introduced in 1789 into certain of the rubrics of the English Liturgy, in adapting them to the use of the American Church, show that it was the intention of [1] See the "Direction" on the reverse of the title.

[2] It ought perhaps to be noted that Bishop Drummond's service (1796) contemplates an offertory and the use of the prayer for the Church, and Bishop Torry's book (1849) an offertory, on occasions when there is no Communion. In the use of the prayer for the Church in the former service, it is curious to observe, the words "alms and" "are to be omitted, except when the offering is to be given away in charity. . . . N. B. The offerings of the people, when for the support of the clergy, are not alms, but a debt. See 1 Cor. ix. chap. from the 7. to the 15 verse."

the revisers that the non-communicants should withdraw from the Church after the Sermon and before the Offertory and the prayer for the Church. The English Book says: "Then shall follow the Sermon"—"Then shall the Priest return to the Lord's Table and begin the Offertory"—"And when there is a Communion, the Priest shall then place upon the Table so much Bread and Wine as he shall think sufficient." But the American Book says: "Then shall follow the Sermon. After which, the Minister, when there is a Communion, shall return to the Lord's Table and begin the Offertory"—"And the Priest shall then place upon the Table so much Bread and Wine as he shall think sufficient." And instead of putting the break in the service at the end of the prayer for the Church, the American Book directs that when there is no Communion, there "shall be said all that is appointed at the Communion, unto the end of the Gospel, concluding with the Blessing."[1]

There can be no question as to the custom which prevailed, in Connecticut at least, until twenty or twenty-five years ago, when, in spite of tradition and the implied direction of rubrics, the English custom began to be observed. The Convocation of the clergy of Connecticut, at their meeting, September 6, 1821, resolved, "That the congregations be dismissed, previous to the Communion service, with a Collect and the shorter benediction."[2] This was done after the sermon, and the offerings were received from communicants alone. This was in accordance with primitive usage; "for in these days it was a privilege to be allowed to make their oblations, and a sort of lesser excommunication to be debarred from it";[1] and the great Intercession belonged to the most solemn part of the service.

Having thus used his influence successfully to secure to the Church in America a Communion-Office based on primitive models, and having more than fulfilled the requirements of the Concordate into which he had entered at the time of his consecration, Bishop Seabury returned to his Diocese. His clergy met in Convocation, June 2d, 1790, and made a "short examination" of the Constitution and Canons adopted at Philadelphia; but there is no minute on record of any action in regard to the Prayer-Book. An adjourned meeting was held at Newtown, September 30th, 1790, and on the second day of the session, October 1st, the very day on which the new book was to go into use, we find the following record made:

"The alterations in the Book of Common Prayer made by the General Convention at Philadelphia, were read and considered.

"On motion, The question was put, in these words: 'Whether we confirm the doings of our Proctors in the General Convention at Philadelphia, on the 2d day of Octob^r, 1789.'

"Which passed in the affirmative by the votes of every member present, the Rev'd Mr. Sayre excepted."[2]

On the following day

"A motion was made, that the Convocation should determine on a mode of introducing the Constitution & Canons & Liturgy in our several parishes: When it was agreed that each of the Clergy should take that method that should appear to him the most eligible. Agreed also that in the use of the New-Prayer-Book, we be as uniform as possible,—& for that purpose, that we approach as near the Old Liturgy, as a compliance with the Rubrics of the New will allow."[1]

On October 5th, 1791, it was "Voted: That, in the use of the Common Prayer Book we will use the Nicene-Creed on Communion Days, and the Apostle's Creed on all other days."[2]

The new Prayer-Book having been thus adopted, "Bishop Seabury's office passed at once out of general use."[3] "But the change from established customs is seldom easy, and whether the people loved to have it so or not, some of the clergy of that day never learned to carry out in full practice the literal meaning of the rubrical directions of the new Prayer-Book."[4] Dr. Hallam says that the Rev. Charles Seabury (the Bishop's son, and his successor at New London, 1796–1814), probably used it, but that it was never used there after he himself became a communicant.[5] When he took charge of the parish in 1835, Dr. Hallam found some half dozen copies of the pamphlet lying about in the pews of the Church,[6] and it was from one of these, and through his kindness, that this reprint was made in 1874. The writer was informed by the late Rev. Dr. Haight, that Bishop Brownell told him that when he came into the Diocese in 1819, he found some of the older clergy still using Bishop Seabury's Communion-Office, and that he had considerable difficulty in persuading them to substitute the Prayer-Book office in its place.

[1] Ibid. [2] Ibid. [3] Dr. Beardsley. [4] Id., Hist., i. 415.
[5] Ms. Letter. [6] Annals, p. 71.

The latest remnant of the former use of which the writer has been able to learn was at Cheshire in 1835, when the Rev. Reuben Ives, a former rector of the parish, who had been ordained by Bishop Seabury and had been his assistant at New London, being called upon by the Rev. Dr. Beardsley, then a Deacon in charge of the Parish, to officiate in the Communion Service, "invariably read what is called the prayer of Humble Access immediately after consecrating the elements and just before communicating, as it stands at present in the Scottish office."[1]

So Bishop Seabury's office passed out of use and has become almost forgotten.

It may remove a misunderstanding to add that the Scotch office has not been for many years, if indeed it ever was, the only Communion-office employed by the clergy of Scotland. Bishop Torry said in 1846 that, when he began his ministerial service some sixty years before, there was but one of about sixty-four congregations in Scotland in which the national Eucharistic Form was not used; and he lamented bitterly the introduction and use of the English Office.[2] The canons of 1811 declared the Scotch Office to be of primary authority, and to be used at all Consecrations of Bishops, and forbade its being laid aside in any place where it was in use without the sanction of the College of Bishops.[3] Yet in 1819, no clergyman in the diocese of Edinburgh except the Bishop made use of it.[4] The present canons of the Scotch Church, adopted in 1863 and 1876, allow both the Scotch and the English forms, giving the primary authority to the latter by ordering it to be used at all Consecrations, Ordinations, and Synods, and in all new Congregations unless a majority of the applicants desire the other.[1] At the same time, it is the opinion of those best qualified to judge of the question, that the feeling in favor of the national office is increasing in Scotland.

It is hoped that it will not be amiss to add to this historical sketch a few notes on certain parts of the office which is here reprinted.

This service departs from most of the Scotch service-books, including that of 1637, in substituting the word "Priest" for "Presbyter" throughout the service, following therein all the English books from the beginning, and the Non-juring book of 1718.

The offertory sentences are the same as in the book of 1637, one being "reserved for a form of presentation before the Lord."[2] Those which were not then adopted from the English service were "taken out of Bishop Andrewes his notes upon the Book of Common Prayer."[3] In 1 Cor. ix. 13, Bishop Seabury changed "live of the things of the temple" (the authorized version of ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ) into "live of the sacrifice," which accords with all the editions of the English Prayer-Book, and has passed over into the American office.

The expression in the rubric after the presentation of the offertory, "shall then offer up, and place the bread and wine prepared for the sacrament upon the Lord's table," was also taken from the book of 1637. The order for the mixture of water with the wine was not in that book, nor, as will be seen from the collation above given, in the Scotch office of 1764; but the English service of 1549 had said "putting thereto a little pure and clean water," and the Non-jurors' service of 1718 had given the same direction, adding "in the view of the people." The question of the mixture was one of the subjects of dispute between the Usagers and the Non-usagers;[1] and it would seem that Bishop Seabury agreed with the former. Bishop Andrewes and Archbishop Laud are said to have practised the mixture.[2] The English books gave no instructions as to placing the bread and wine upon the table from 1552 to 1662; and at the latter date (as will be noticed again presently) the words "and oblations" were inserted in the prayer for the Church.

One of the most strange things in the American Communion-Service is that the use of the old Proper Preface for Trinity Sunday, or even the use of the alternative form, is left discretionary. The second form is said to have been allowed, because the first was too strong doctrine to be altogether acceptable to Bishop Provoost; but whether it was to please him (although he was not present at the Convention of 1789) that the use of any Proper Preface on that day was made discretionary, does not appear.

The impressive and solemn words with which the Prayer of Consecration begins are first found in the service of 1764. In the fifth line of this prayer it will be noticed that Bishop Seabury inserted "there" after "made." This word is found in all the English books, in Stephens's liturgies, and in the Scotch book of 1637. It was dropped from the Scotch office in 1755, and does not appear again in it. It seems very probable that it was omitted from a conviction that the Oblation which Christ made of Himself was offered (or at least begun), not on the Cross, but in the upper room at the institution of the Eucharist.[1] The reading "own" for "one" is found in Stephens and in the Scotch books beginning with that of 1755;[2] the word "one" may have been changed by the Scotch bishops because it seemed to deny the truth of the continual oblation in Heaven.[3] "Memorial" does not replace "memory" in the Scotch offices till 1764. The words "and sacrifice" were inserted in both of Stephens's liturgies and in the book of 1637.

By the use of "whosoever" instead of "we and all others who," Bishop Seabury changed the last Intercession in the prayer of Consecration from the third to the first person; and it was probably through inadvertence that, both in his office and in the American book, the latter part of the sentence retains the pronouns of the third person.

[1] See Johnson's Unbloody Sacrifice, vol. i., chap. ii., sect. 1, espy. p. 68, ed. 1714.

[2] By misprint or otherwise, "own" appears in several editions of the English Prayer-Book many years earlier than Stephens. Gibson, pp. 27, 28.

At the General Convention of 1868, the Committee on the Prayer-Book reported that the confusion was not due to any typographical error, and that they were unanimously of the opinion that it was not advisable to change the present phraseology.[1]

It is very difficult if not impossible to suggest any reason for the insertion of the words "and oblations" at the beginning of the prayer for the Church in Bishop Seabury's office. In 1549, when the prayer came between the Trisagion and the Consecration, there was no mention of either alms or oblations; but in 1552, when the prayer was placed immediately after the Offertory, the words "to accept our alms [almose] and" were inserted. In 1662, when the rubric provided for placing the bread and wine upon the table (as has been noticed above), the words "and oblations" were further added, most probably referring to the elements which had thus been set apart for a holy use.[2] The book of 1637 followed in this respect the English book then in use. Unaccountably enough, the Non-jurors' book of 1718, placing the prayer for the Church after both Oblation and Invocation, says, "we humbly beseech thee most mercifully to accept these our oblations, and to receive these our prayers." This book has a prayer of offering immediately

[1] Journal, p. 77.

[2] So Bp. Patrick, quoted by Trevor, Catholic Doctrine of the Eucharist, p. 419. Dr. Trevor considers this to be, not the "oblatio primitiarum," but the sacramental oblation and of the same meaning as that which follows the words of Institution in the Scotch and American Offices. It seems impossible to believe that it was so intended by the English revisers. Bp. Patrick's words show that he had no such idea.

following the presentation of the alms and of the bread and wine; so that the words "to accept these our oblations" seem meaningless, or at least superfluous. In 1743, the first "standard" Scotch office placed the prayer for the Church at the end of the Consecration-Prayer, and prayed for acceptance of the alms only. In 1755, the passage from I. Chron. xxix. was ordered to be said "after presenting the elements and offertory upon the altar,"[1] but the prayer for the Church was in the same place as in 1743, and asked for acceptance of the alms alone. In 1764, the words of David were ordered to be used on presenting the alms and before presenting the elements, and the prayer for the Church was in this particular as before. But in 1796 the words "and oblations" appear, as in Bishop Seabury's office; and there is a note providing that they shall be omitted when there is no Communion (a strange provision, by the way, to insert after the prayer of Consecration). The edition of 1800 says "alms and oblations"; that of 1844, "oblations"; the two later editions, "alms and oblations." These variations show a confusion of thought on the subject; and perhaps the change in Bishop Seabury's office and in the present Scotch service is best explained by supposing that "alms" and "oblations" were considered as synonymous. The alms are called "oblations" in the services of 1637 and 1718 and in all the Scotch offices.

The commemoration of the departed is adopted, with considerable alterations, from that in the English book of 1549.

[1] See the "Direction" on the reverse of the title page.

Hall's reprint does not give the full text of the Lord's Prayer; but as the change of "which" into "who" is one for which, among others, America has been blamed, it may be worth while to notice that certain of the Scotch offices—one of them, that from which Bishop Seabury took his office—have the more modern use of the relative.[1]

The Private Ejaculations and Prayers seem to have been composed by Bishop Seabury. Bishop Drummond's edition of the Scotch book, which first appeared in 1796, has similar prayers, one of which bears a close resemblance to the "Prayer to God" in Bishop Seabury's office.

As to the form of the Gloria in Excelsis, Mr. Skinner has this note:

"Of this very ancient hymn we have two editions: one is found in the Apostolical Constitutions; the other is annexed to the Psalter of the Alexandrian Bible, presented by Lucan [Cyrillus Lucaris, Patriarch of Alexandria, and afterwards of Constantinople] to Charles I. [in 1628]. As there is good reason to believe that the Constitutions have been defaced and altered by the Arian party,[2] it seems more than probable that of the two copies the Alexandrian is the more genuine. When the first reformed Liturgy was published, the Alexandrian copy had not been discovered; but after its appearance

[1] Bp. Wren argued for "who" instead of "which" in the Lord's Prayer and elsewhere, calling the use of the latter "a very solecism." Fragmentary Illustrations, ed. Jacobson, p. 47.

[2] They were for some such reason rejected by the Quinisext Council (Act. Concil., ed. Hardouin, iii. 1659, A, B); compare Blunt's Dict. Doct. and Hist. Theol., sub voce, p. 149.

the compilers of the present Scotch office did well to profit by it."[1]

Following are translations of three Greek texts of the Gloria in Excelsis. The first is from the hymns at the end of the Psalter in the Alexandrian Manuscript, probably of the fifth century;[2] the second and the third are from different texts of the Apostolic Constitutions.[3]

The repetition of the clause "Thou that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy upon us," first appears in English in the book of 1552,[4] and has been retained in the English books since. The Non-jurors also retained it in 1718; but it has been omitted from the Scotch office since 1755. The repetition, as will be seen from the note to the translation of the first text, is not quite without authority.

Attention has already been called to the fact that in the most essential part of the service—the prayer of Consecration—Stephens's second Liturgy, the Non-jurors' book, the Scotch services since 1755, Bishop Seabury's office, and the present American book differ from all other Communion-offices in the English language in placing the words of Institution, the Oblation, and the Invocation of the Holy Ghost, in the order in which they are to be found in all the ancient liturgies. It would be beyond the scope of this sketch to point out the doctrines involved in the different orders in which these parts of the Consecration Prayer have been—sometimes, it is to be feared, thoughtlessly—arranged.[1]

The Roman liturgy had placed the words of Institution in an abnormal position, after the Invocation and before the Oblation. This arrangement was followed in the first reformed book—that of 1549. In the next revision, in 1552, the Oblation was dropped altogether (perhaps from a conviction that it was out of place, and so taught false doctrine), and the Invocation was made strangely indefinite by the omission of all mention of the Holy Spirit. The English office still retains this form. The Non-jurors' book, taking the words of the Clementine liturgy, took also the primitive order; and the Scotch Bishops, in framing the services from which Bishop Seabury took the office here reproduced and to which we are indebted for our American Prayer of Consecration, though they used the words of the book of 1549, changed their order to agree with primitive custom. This should be carefully noted, because, as we have seen, it has been said inadvertently more than once that Bishop Seabury followed the first book of King

Edward VI. in the changes which he introduced into the liturgy.[1]

The following table will be of interest as showing the variations in order which are shown by the different Communion-Offices in the English language. The several parts of the Scotch service and of that of Bishop Seabury are numbered in the order of their arrangement, and the numbers in the other columns refer to the parts of the service which bear those numbers respectively in the wide column. The first column on the left shows the primitive order of the six things which are found in all the old Liturgies and were considered essential; the second gives the arrangement when the Latin Mass was supplemented by an English Communion in 1548; the third shows how this arrangement passed over into the book of 1549; and the fourth contains the order in the proposed Scotch book of 1637, known as Archbishop Laud's. On the right of the wide column will be found the order of the present American and that of the present English Communion-Offices. The figures which denote the three essential parts of the Consecration-prayer are printed in bold type, that the variation in their order may be seen at a glance.

[1] Even Dr. Jarvis fell into this mistake. See A Voice from Conn., pp. 25, 26. Dr. Dix (Lectures on the Prayer-Book, p. 83) has made a similar error in saying that the book of 1637 "is still used in Scotland" and that it "gave us American Churchmen our own stately Canon."

APPENDIX.

The writer is indebted to the kindness of Charles J. Hoadly, M.A., Librarian of the State of Connecticut, for the loan, from his private collection, of another volume of a liturgical character which was published by Bishop Seabury, and for permission to print a description of the book in this place.

It is a 12mo volume, of fifteen sheets, not paged, with the following title-page: The | Psalter | or | Psalms | of | David, | Pointed as they are to be sung or said in | Churches. | —— | With the Order for Morning and Evening | Prayer Daily throughout the Year. | —— | New London: | Printed by Thomas C. Green, on the parade. | 1795. |

The contents are as follow: Morning Prayer; Evening Prayer [so much as is not in Morning Prayer]; The Creed of St. Athanasius; The Litany; Prayers; Thanksgivings; A Catechism; The Psalter: or, Psalms of David.

The services are those of the American Prayer-Book, except, of course, the Athanasian Creed, which is taken from the English Book. The rubrics are omitted, but the different prayers and other parts of the services have the proper headings prefixed. Before the versicles, the word "Minister" is replaced by "Priest," except in the Litany; and the Canticles and Psalter have the musical colon in each verse, as in the English Prayer-Book. In the Psalter, the Latin titles are omitted, and, besides a few other changes of words, there is a substitution of a future tense for the imperative mood in passages which might be called "damnatory"; thus, Psalm v. 11 reads, "Thou wilt destroy them, O God; they shall perish through their own imaginations: thou wilt cast them out in the multitude of their ungodliness; for they have rebelled against thee."

Bishop Seabury's reasons for making the changes in the Psalter are given in the preface, which is in the following words:

ADVERTISEMENT.

It is remarked by the learned and pious Dr. Horne, the late Bishop of Norwich, in the preface to his commentary on the psalms, p. 53. That "the offence taken at the supposed uncharitable and vindictive spirit of the imprecations, which occur in some of the psalms, ceases immediately, if we change the imperative for the future, and read, not Let them be confounded, &c.: but, They shall be confounded &c. of which the Hebrew is equally capable. Such passages will then have no more difficulty in them than the other frequent predictions of divine vengeance in the writings of the prophets, or denunciations of it in the gospel, intended to warn, to alarm, and to lead sinners to repentance, that they may fly from the wrath to come."

The same observation was formerly made by Dr. Hammond in his preface to his commentary on the psalms, p. 32. Supported by the authority of men so eminent for their abilities, learning, and piety, the following edition of the psalter is published with the alterations they have recommended, the imperative mood being changed for the future tense, in all the imprecations which occurred in the psalms. Besides which a few old words are changed for those which are more modern, and two or three expressions hard to be understood, are altered, still retaining the spirit and meaning of the psalm.

By these means, it is hoped, the psalms will be freed from all objections, and used with more devotion as a part of divine service.

SAMUEL,
Bishop of Connecticut and Rhode Island.

New London,
Jan. 16th, 1795.

Bishop White tells us that the House of Bishops, in 1789, did not approve of the "Selections of Psalms" which were then prepared and allowed to be used instead of the portions of the Psalter. "But Bishop Seabury," he adds, "interested himself in the subject the less, as knowing that neither himself nor any of his clergy would make use of the alternative, but that they would adhere to the old practice."[1] It would seem that the objections to the use of the "damnatory clauses" were pressed more strongly upon Bishop Seabury's attention after the new Prayer-Book had come into use, and that he adopted this method of obviating them. In fact, if tradition may be trusted, his special design in setting forth this revision of the Psalms was to quiet the mind of an influential member of his congregation, who was a relative of his.

The number of passages in which the imperative is thus replaced by the future is ninety-seven. In a few cases, as Ps. vii. 9, xciv. 2, no change has been made. In fifty-four instances, which seem to be all the occurrences of the possessive case, the apostrophe which belongs to that case is omitted; and in four of these a plural form is substituted for the singular, as in "mercies" for "mercy's." These methods of writing the possessive are found in the standard English Book [ed. Stephens, 1849]. The apostrophe is used eleven times in such words as "thro'," "bro't," etc. There are many evident misprints, as "heart" for "hart" in xlii. 1, "help" for "held" in xciv. 18, "turned" for "tuned" in cl. 5; but certain spellings seem to have been purposely adopted, such as "doth" (for "doeth"), "dost" (for "doest"), "wholsom," "hony," "roring," "thy self" (two words), "rejoyce," "shew," "Cherubims," etc. Some of these are found in the English standard.

Following is a list of all the passages which show changes in words from the Psalter of the American Prayer-Book, other than those in the damnatory clauses mentioned above. Words and phrases marked with a * are taken from the English Book; those marked with a † are taken from Bishop Horne's Commentary.

Ps. iii. 2: "Many there are that say."
iv. 6 and v. 5: "are" (for "be").
x. 17: "thou wilt visit his ungodliness, till thou find none."
xviii. 2: "who" (for "which").
xix. 11: "keeping them" (for "keeping of them").
xxix. 8: "The voice of the Lord maketh the oaks to tremble, and layeth open the thick forests."†
xxx. 6: "hadst" (for "hast"; so in old English book).
xli. 5: "speak evil of me and say."
xli. 7: "imagine this evil, saying."
xlii. 6: "disquieted" (for "so disquieted").*
xlii. 10: "on" (for "in").*
xlvi. 9: "snappeth" (for "knappeth").
xlix. 5: "the wickedness of my enemies."†
xlix. 10: "others" (for "other"); so lxxiii. 8.
xlix. 14: "they lie in the grave like sheep."
xlix. 14: "shall have domination."*
xlix. 15: "from the place of the grave."
lv. 9: "Defeat their councils, O Lord."†

Ps. lv. 21: "such as were at peace."
lvi. 8: "Thou tellest my flittings."*
lxiii. 5: "on this manner."*
lxvii. 5: omit "yea."*
lxviii. 13: "lien" (for "lain").*
lxxii. 16: "He shall be like a field of corn on the earth."
lxxiii. 26: "wilt destroy" (for "hast destroyed").
lxxiv. 14: "breakest" (for "brakest").
lxxvi. 1: "Jury" (for "Jewry").*
lxxvi. 10, 12: "restrain" (for "refrain").
lxxvii. 6: "spirits" (for "spirit").*
lxxxi. 1: "ye" (for "we").
lxxxiii. 6: "Hagarens."*
lxxxiii. 7: "Amalech."*
xciv. 4: "all the wicked doers."
xciv. 20: "Wilt thou have anything to do with the throne of wickedness: which establisheth iniquity by a law?" † xcix. 1: "never so unpatient."*
c. 1: "O be joyful" (for "O be ye joyful").*
cii. 20: "mournings" (for "mourning").*
civ. 11: "all beasts" (for "all the beasts").*
cxvi. 10: "I said in my haste, there is no help in man."
cxlviii. 2: "host" (for "hosts").*

"Judah" is thus spelt but once, and it appears seven times as "Juda." In the standard English book, it is found four times with "h," and four times without it.

As to the publication of the Athanasian Creed in this service book, it is very probable that it was not intended to be read in the service. This Creed had been omitted from the book proposed in 1785, and the majority of the members of the Convention were determined not to restore it.[1] When the revision of 1789 was in progress, the matter was discussed again; and Bishop White says in regard to it:

"The author consented to the proposal of Bishop Seabury, of making it [the Athanasian Creed] an amendment to the draft sent by the other house; to be inserted with a rubric permitting the use of it. This, however, was declared to be on the principle of accommodation to the many who were reported to desire it, especially in Connecticut; where, it was said, the omitting of it would hazard the reception of the book. It was the author's intention never to read the creed himself; and he declared his mind to that effect. Bishop Seabury, on the contrary, thought that without it there would be a difficulty in keeping out of the church the errors to which it stands opposed.....The creed was inserted by way of amendment, to be used or omitted at discretion. But the amendment was negatived by the other house; and when the subject afterwards came up in conference, they would not allow of the creed in any shape; which was thought intolerant by the gentlemen from New England, who, with Bishop Seabury, gave it up with great reluctance."[1]

Bishop Seabury's intention in pleading for the permissory use of the Creed is shown in a letter written by him December 29th, 1790, to the Rev. Dr. Parker:

"With regard to the propriety of reading the Athanasian Creed, I never was fully convinced. With regard to the impropriety of banishing it out of the Prayer Book, I am clear; and I look upon it, that those gentlemen who rigidly insisted upon its being read as usual, and those who insisted on its being thrown out, both acted from the same uncandid, uncomplying temper. They seem to me to have aimed at forcing their own opinion on their brethren. And I do hope, though possibly I hope in vain, that Christian charity and love of union will some time bring that Creed into this book, were it only to stand as articles of faith stand, and to show that we do not renounce the Catholic doctrine of the Trinity as held by the Western Church."[1]

Whether the amended Psalter and the Athanasian Creed were used in St. James's Church, New London, or elsewhere, can probably never be determined; but the fact that the first Bishop of Connecticut prepared and published this volume cannot cease to be one of the most interesting facts in the early history of the Prayer-Book of the American Church.

[The following seems to have escaped the research of Bishop Burgess:

[1822.]

[530.a Rufus Murray . . . . . June 7th. Bp. P. Chase, D. æ. 73, Aug. 2d, 1869.]

NOTE.

There were probably but very few persons living twenty years since who could have compiled such a "List" as that prepared by the late Bishop Burgess, and which forms the staple of this book. It was only by unwearied labor, the exercise of no little tact, and a large expenditure of money on the part of the deceased Prelate that he drew from a variety of sources the information which he has digested into a volume. Such universal love and respect were felt for him, that doubtless he succeeded in collecting material for his work when most others would have failed. If the compilation of a "List of Persons Ordained Deacons in the P. E. Church" had been left to the present day, it would be next to impossible to find any individual who could successfully execute such a work. The book now issued is intended to present an exact reprint of the MS. which was left by Bishop Burgess, with certain suggestions for slight alterations in a few places, and many additions.

In the present volume the name of every person who attained to the honors and responsibilities of a Bishop is printed in Small Capitals. This distinction was not made in the manuscript copy. Bishop Burgess numbered the names up to and including 40. This numbering has now been continued to the end of the List.

It was evidently his intention to give the date of the death of those who had passed away, and also the ages of each at the time of his decease. Many of the clergy whose names appear on the List have been called home since the estimable compiler has left these earthly scenes. Items concerning some of these are given in this printed volume. Such additions are distinguished by square brackets, thus, [ ]. This sign marks all the additions made by the copyist, and it also indicates the very few alterations suggested by him. Both amount however to two hundred and ninety-one.

The Index is the sole work of the copyist. Whether it adds anything to the value of the book or not others must decide.

The copyist may perhaps be permitted to say in conclusion, that during the progress of the attempt to bring this volume before the public he has repeatedly been reminded of the saying:

"Heaven from all creatures hides the book of fate."

Could he have foreseen one-half the labor and disagreeables which this enterprise has involved, he would certainly never have entered upon it.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are offered with the fullest confidence in their efficacy. They have been thoroughly tested, and maintain the good reputation they have justly acquired. These Lozenges are prepared from a highly esteemed recipe for alleviating Bronchial Affections, Asthma, Hoarseness, and Coughs.

Singers and Public Speakers will find Troches useful in clearing the voice when taken before Singing or Speaking, and relieving the throat after an unusual exertion of the vocal organs. The Troches are recommended and prescribed by Physicians, and have had testimonials from eminent men throughout the country. Being an article of true merit, and having proved their efficacy by a test of many years, each year finds them in new localities in various parts of the world; and the Troches are universally pronounced better than other articles.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.

"I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first, excepting to think yet better of that which I began thinking well of."

Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

"For Throat-Troubles they are a specific." N. P. WILLIS.

[From Mr. T. DUCHARME, for many years Chorister of French Parish Church, Montreal]

"It gives me great pleasure to certify to the efficacy of your Bronchial Troches in an affection of the throat and voice induced by public singing. They have suited my case exactly, relieving my throat and clearing the voice so that I could sing with ease."

[From Rev. HENRY WILKES, D. D., Pastor of Zion Church, Montreal.]

"When somewhat hoarse from cold or over-exertion in public speaking, I have uniformly found Brown's Troches afford relief."
